THE DAILY EVENING BULLETIN-PHILADELPHIA. THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1869.

The suplight fills the trembling air. And baimy days their guerdons bring; The earth again is young and fair nd smorous with musky spring The golden nurslings of the May In splendor strew the spangled green, And hues of tender beauty play, Entangled where the willows lean.

BETROTHED ANEW.

Mark how the rippled currents flow. What lustres on the meadow lie!

And hark, the songsters come and go And trill between the earth and sky. Who told us that the years had fled Or borne afar our blissful youth i Buch joys are all about us spread, e know the whisper was not truth

The birds, that break from grass and grove Sing every carol that they sung When first our velus were rich with love, And May her mantle round as flung

O fresh-lit dawn ! Immortal life ! O earth's betrothal, sweet and true, With whose delight our souls are rife ind ave their vernal vows renew

Then, darling, walk with me this morn Let your brown treases drink its sheen; These violets, within them worn, Of fioral fays shall make you queen.

What though there comes a time of pain When anyon winds forbodo decay; The days of love are born again, That fabled time is far away !

And never seemed the land so fair As now, nor birds such notes to sing, Bince first within your chining hair I, wore the blossoms of the spring. —E. C. STE

It then traces, with he warmth and sympathy of a lady admirer, the events, which were all social and artistic. of Mendelssohn's fortunate life. To the Eag-lish edition, which is the one drawn upon by Leypoldt & Holt, Lady Wallace has appended some agreeable letters not published in the German, such as those written in Eaglish to German, such as those written in English to Mr. Bartholomew and Mr. Moore. Although disconnected and flowery to a rather bewild ering extent, the biography is full of charm to the genuine lover of Mendelssohn and of to the genuine lover of mendelssonn and of and many a celebrity tailed in winning our doll, which you chewed until the sawdust ran the beat being so intense that even the marble the circle of musical people who ministered to his art-life. The Miseries of Mining in White Pine* The California papers are full of notes of travel to White Pine, the new silver discovery. Here is an extract: "At one station the party halted for a square meal. There was a tent, and in it a huge kettle of coffee nd a camp oven. After waiting a few minutes, the landlord came to the door and snapped out, "Room for four." Our informant went in with three other men, and they nelt around a flat box, which the hotel cener had turned down on the ground. On the top were four basins of strong coffee, and by each dirty tin was a dirty black biscuit nd an egg. The coffee and eggs were good, and the biscuits were good on the outside, that is, the eater had to choose between two evils—dirt over the top crust, dough under it. Each loaf was like a cream cake, perfectly soft inside. The hungry men tore off the top crust, and, after blowing, scraping and rubbing it to remove the allu-vial deposite, put it down with a gusto and torrents of strong coffee. The inside masses of dough were left by cach man's basin. When the men had finished their meal, and while they were yet kneeling, their host put bis soot begimed and greasy hand over the box, and spoke again, 'Four dollars.' He was Night Inspector-Miex. Crawford. Night Inspector-Wm. W. Burns. Plump went the silver into his pouchy pocket, and pop went the four masses of dough back into the oven. As soon as a new crust was baked over them, eggs cooked, and the basins were refilled with offee, four more hungry men knelt down, ate off the crust, rejected the rest of the dough for another baking, and paid their dollar each for the meal. It was calculated that one more stage load of customers would finish the biscuits, and put the landlord to the trouble of kneading a new batch." From our Late Editions of Yesterday By the Atlantic Cable.
