And my brow ached too heavily to weep, Opprest with sorrow past and future fer Too weary to wake—too sad to sleep. With listicss hand I drew away the blind, To look where lay the morning dull and gray; I heard no whisper of the cold night wind, saw no gleam to chase the gloom away.

RUFSSING IN DISGUISE

Spread like a morning veil on every hill dawn crept; The raindrops on the trees lay cold and still, the head of affairs in France, or 'when I become Emperor,' and I then looked upon him as being as mad as a March hare, or as Premiums in 1868, Sadly I turned and lay me down again, Till sorrow's leaden trance my sense did steal, As those who, lulled by very strength of pain, Forget their pain awhile, and cease to feel. So passed the hours away, and I awoke;
