INSURANCE ON RENTS.—The Franklin Fire Insurance Company calls especial attention to the following section of the conditions of the policy issued by them on the rents of all kinds of buildings: XV. All insurances of rents. by this policy shall be understood and agreed to be upon the terms, conditions and limitations following: The Company shall indemnify the insured from any loss of rent he may sustain by a fire hap-pening within the period limited to the build-ing specified, whereby it shall have become untennatable, and that although part of the consequential loss of rent be after the period of insurance shall have expired. The loss shall be computed from the date of the fire; shall the contrast, when the articles were first man-ufactured thirty years ago, in a small, narrow and contracted apartment, and their manuand contracted apartment, and then man facture of to-day in the present large and com-modious structure, is most striking indeed. And even the present manmoth laboratory, handsomely constructed, with its huge tanks, improved machinery and numerous devices to manufacture in a sessing demand is not improved machinery and numerous devices to supply the hourly increasing demand, is not sufficient to keep pace with the growing popu-larity of these remedies, and it is to be sup-planted-by-a-huge-marble building, at-the-northeast corner of Sixth and Arch streets, which, when erected, will rival in appearance any similar establishment in America. The efforts of the Doctor have been crowned with reputation and wealth still in unforced with reputation and wealth; still in unaffected simplicity of demeanor and true manliness of character, he is the same man of thirty years ago. With the benefits of a larger experience, he demonstrates more successfully than ever, the curability of that fearful disease, Consumpthe curating of that fearning usease, Consump-tion, which annually sweeps away so many valuable lives and which so nearly terminated his own. One day we hear of him in this city, another day in that, always administering to the afflicted, who anxiously await his coming. the afflicted, who anxiously await his coming. He has now arrived at that age, fifty-five, when he can and does rationally enjoy the sweets of a fortune accumulated by his own hands. Surrounded by his family, he has contributed everything that comfort and happi-ness require. His handsome city residence is the seat of luxuriance and pleasure, while his construction to force the force of the country retreat, the favorite resort of the Doctor, is unsurpassed, both as regards natural scenery and the many artificial embellishscenery and the many articlal embension ments, completed at a vast outlay of money. The land is beautifully located at Schenck's Station, in Bucks county, about fifteen miles from Philadelphia. To enter into a descrip-tion of the farm which comprises some three hundred acres, would require several columns of this paper; the finely cultivated fields are models of farming, and the taste and finish with which they are surrounded please the eye of every beholder. The mansion occupied by the Doctor's family during the summer months, has all the improvements of a modern eity residence; the walks are beautifully laid out and the grounds handsomely decorated with flowers and shrubbery; a boat-house, a billiard-room, a private fish-pond and a handbilliard-room, a private fish-pond and a hand-some yacht are among a few of the attractions. The barns are well filled with the products of the farm, which is superintended by the most competent hands, and has been wrought to a high state of productiveness. As in the man-agement of his business, so in the management of this fine place, improvement is the order of the day. Only the choicest breeds of stock, the most improved and desi-rable machinery for the culture of the land, and the best, grain, most_tempting_fruits_and. and the best grain, most tempting fruits and rarest flowers are to be found. Improvement never ceases. Workmen are constantly en-gaged in building new structures or improv-ing the old ones, for it must be remembered that the Doctor can casily devote a few acres of bis actorsitic grounds to improving what is of his extensive grounds to improving what is now known as the "Station," but is destined ere long, we predict, to be called "Schencks-wille." All the spare moments of the Doctor, winter and summer, when not engaged at his places of business, find him at the farm sur-conduct by his workman tables on active white and summer, when not engaged at ms places of business, find him at the farm sur-rounded by his workmen, taking an active part in all that is being done. He studies the comfort and convenience of his fellow-heings as well as his own. One noticeable feature among others, illustrative of this, that strikes the visitor, is the large clock, erec-ted at great expense, on the cupola of the barn; the four large faces looking from each point of the compass, render this an almost in-dispensable convenience to those residing in that locality. Thus is the time of this man employed. He has no idle moments, his labors are incessant, and it was only such labors, such perseverance, such energy and not that "luck" so oft attributed, that made this self-made man what he is to day, and his memory ever here-after to be cherished by those who are so for-tunate as to be classed among his, friends.— Pittsburgh Gazette.

The people have elected Grant, He sits in Washington, His enemies may rave and rant, He has the White House won. Old Andy with his carpet-bag Has trot for Tennessee; Around the circle never drag His friends in misery. So Pain Paint, too, has every vote Of those who Pain Paint try; 'A million men fling off their coat, And Wolcott's Pain Paint cry. Hot Liniments have had their day, And Blister Plasters, too; Put out the fire, the people say, Hot liquids will not do.

PAIN PAINT will cool, but never smart, fits cooling kiss will heal; Who know, will never with it part, To folly never kneel. No fire, no heat, no burning stuff, No adding smart to pain, A heathen custom old enough To tinge the check with shame.

Hot liniments the people scout. And PAIN PAINT has the run, All hot reliefs go up the spout, PAIN PAINT the field has won. Let every woman, man or child, Try PAIN PAINT free of cost; On Chatham square then stop awhile, Where pain is quickly lost. Advice and private rooms are free, For women or for men; And all who come can quickly see What crowds do there attend.
