Weal strew their graves with flowers fair-The richest flowers of spring; To the green mounds where lie the bra Your floral tribute bring! Meep fresh in memory's choicest niche The deeds of valor done By those who saved from treason's grasp. The land of Washington! From dark rebellion's ruthless hand Our country rests secure-A home for all who choose to come; A home that will endure: The tropic island of the sea, Tired of the rule of Spain, laises the banner of the free Against her kingly reign. The despots of the olden world, Who hoped to see us sink, Are all dismayed that now we stand Boyed on our ruin's brink. And shall we fail to give the meed Of earnest, grateful praise To those whose fortitude secured Our nation length of days? No! let fair maidens bring their flowers To strew upon each bier, And with the springtime's gentle show en Let fall the thankful tear; For safe beyond all future harm, Columbia's soil is blest. Now let the patriotic thrill Arise in every breast! ring forth the flowers of blooming spring To deck the soldier's grave! LUTHERAN SYNOD.

Closing Proceedings.

READING, May 28.—After the usual opening services in the Synod, last evening, the consideration of the reports of the committees on church visitation and on redivision of conferences, previously presented, was postponed, and the same referred for discussion to the Committee on Conferences.

The committee on the wants of the Theological Seminary in Philadelphia reported, recommending the election of a fourth professor ordinarius, and various alterations in the ar-rangements of the institution. After considerable discussion the whole matter was re-ferred to the Board of Directors.

The matter of the apportionment of the amounts to be raised for benevolent purposes by the different congregations connected with this Synod was referred to the Excentive
