SUNDOWN. I stood by the marge of the Summer sea, As the day was quietly dying, When the waves were halled in a dreamle And the seamews plaintively crying. The broad red disc of the setting sun Was poised on the mighty ocean,

And the wavelets were breaking one by one In the shore, with a dreamy motion. But a gorgeous curtain of blue and gold Now fell on the sleeping billow, and the sun, like a monarch infirm and old, Reclined on a glowing pillow.

But again a change, as he sank to rest, On his couch of surpassing glory, For the hues that trembled on ocean's breast, Mocked the wonders of Eastern story. Slowly these beauties all passed away, As I saw Night's shadows descending, And I deemed it well such a perfect day Should have such a perfect ending.

THE AGONIES OF AN ANGLER. Fishing Without Sentiment. BY JOHN OUILL.

This thing of going a fishing and calling it port is ridiculous. Old Isaac Walton was a leceiver, and his "Complete Angler" is calcu-ated to pervert public morals, and lead the area to pervert public monas, and contains assume that an assume that all the properties of the courages the idea that fishing is a genteel pastime, which affords time for meditation, corded in a work of fiction called Little Dor-rit. To be sure, Mr. Merdle was a swindler, forger and thief, and my calling has been of a less harmful (and less remunerative) nature, but it was all one for that. vho ever went a fishing in his life. I leave it the sufferers if it isn't. Here is Mr. Merdle's case:
"At first, he was dead of all the diseases that e-pit before you can lay your hands on one When you once throw in, you begin to watch see about twenty corks, and as it never budges one inch all the time, you conclude that there ain't any fish about, until you pull up, when you find that some well-balanced and insiduous ember of the funy tribe has sucked all the After enough patient endurance to start to Physician, 'A man can die but once.' By about 11 o'clock in the forenoon, something eight or nine Christian martyrs in life, you get a nibble. Yes, the cork moves slightly, and the matter with the brain, became the favorite theory against the field; and by twelve the other man, and knowing the advice to meet my only need, I instantly halted in the pursuit of which I speak, and rested.

You watch it closely while your mind runs over the big fish you have heard of. You hink of Jenah, of whaling voyages and of the Pressure was so entirely satisfactory to the public mind, and seemed to make every one so comfortable, that it might have lasted all day but for Bar's having taken the real state of the case into Court at half-past nine. Pressure, rgeons you have seen around on the however, so far from being overthrown by the discovery, became a greater favorite than ever. There was a general moralizing upon or a thousand-pound snapper? and you involintarily suggest soup to yourself, while all the time the cork keeps bobbing up and down, until at last she gives one jerk and goes under.

There was a general moralizing upon able to do it, said, There you were! You until at last she gives one jerk and goes under.

Got him, by George! Pull up, and there is a wretched little tish on the hook, that wouldn't satisfy the appetite of a sick sardine, and he cost you just fourteen worms, enough to bait a school of mackerel.

Throw in pagin wat for any large way and tried to make money and had not been able to do it, said, There you were! You no sooner began to devote yourself to the pursuit of wealth, than you got Pressure. The idle people improved the occasion in a similar manner. See, said they, what you brought yourself to be used. chool of mackerel.

Throw in again, wait for an hour, and you overdid it, Pressure came on, and you were don't get a single nibble.

Then you think you are safe to let go and light your pipe. No sooner do you get the match lit, and you can't throw it down because it's the last one you've got, than you get a splendid bite; the cork goes clear out of sight, and before you have a chance to pick up the rod the fish gets off.

Any man who says this isn't aggravating gught to die; he isn't fit to associate with ordinary human belugs.

But you try to encourage yourself by saying that you try to encourage yourself by saying the yould never forget the warning as long as they lived, and that their conduct might be so regulated as to keep off Pressure, and preserve them, a comfort to their friends, for many years."

Just my case,—if I had only known it,—when I was quietly basking in the sunshine in

But you try to encourage yourself by saying that while there's life there's hope, and that when I was quietly basking in the sunshine in perseverance and patience overcome all my Kentish meadow!

fur gone to protest against playing sick lion to any stray donkey with an itching hoof. All Then you pull out and spit on the bait for luck; maybe you blow on it if you are superstitions, and you throw in and get a bite. You pull up several hundred times and never catch him.

Then you get mad; you believe it is an eel and you swear to catch that eel or die. You feel that life will be perfectly joyless and destitute of happiness unless you get a chance to put your grip on to that eel.

At last you hook him and draw him out. He is at the sactive and playful and vivacious. He is at I was going to, and what would become of me At last you hook him and draw him out. He is active, and playful and vivacious. He is a wriggler, and combines himself into letters S and C and X, and runs through the alphabet generally, and slaps you in the face, and gets around your legs and covers you all over with slime.

Then he tangles your line into a hard knot, and when you get your foot on him you find he has swallowed the hook, and just as likely as not you've got to rip that eel clear open from head to tail to get it out, and when you do he will wriggle away from you and annoy as not you've got to fight the test of the most from head to tail to get it out, and when you do he will wriggle away from you and annoy you as long as you stay there.

Ecls never die; immortality is their strong point, and they lay themselves out to make you abjectly miserable.

When you get all straightened out and throw in again, you wait for an hour, but you only get about one first-class bite during that time. You pull up and you have on an enormous fish, and before you get him near the shore he quietly lets go his hold and drops back into his native element.

It is rough on you, I admit, but when you go a fishing you've got to take it as it comes without growling.

There is a kind of subdued melancholy about There is a kind of subdued melancholy about way to turn it to account was to read these

There is a kind of subdued melancholy about it—a regretful disappointment that is pleasant. How interesting it is when you have dropped the last one off, and you get another bite, to make up your mind to get this one anyhow, and then to concentrate all your strength and pull up with a violent jerk, and bing your line back on to a tree, and have it wind around the branches as tight as if it had been pulled by a steam engine, and in such a bewildering condition that you can't get it loose in a week.

This is calculated to make you use hard expressions, but not any more so than it is to have your cork drawn under gently and steadily, and go down, down, down until it is out of sight.

"A carfish, most probably," you say, "they always pull in this manner." You draw your line in gently, and the catty tugs at the other end. "They always do this," you observe.

You pull up slowly, so as to keep him on the hook, and when you get your line out, you most probably find an old snag with more branches than the Pennsylvania Railroad, and covered with mud, and not a solitary fish in the enighborhood while all the time there is a large of the content of turn it to account was to read these way to turn it to account was to read these sermons and these poems inclosed, and written and issued by my correspondent! I beg it may be understood that I relate facts of my own uncommercial experience, and no vain inaginings. The documents in proof lie near my hand.

Another odd entry on the fly-leaf, of a more entertaining character, was the wonderful persistency with which kind sympathizers assumed that I hadinjuriously coupled with the so suddenly relinquished pursuit those personal habits of mine most obviously incompatible of being maintained along with it. As, all that exercise, all that old bathing, all that wind and weather, all that uphill training, all that everything else, say, which is usually carried about by expected with the personal habits of mine most obviously incompatible of being maintained along with it. As, all that ev most probably find an old snag with more branches than the Pennsylvania Railroad, and covered with mud, and not a solitary fish in the neighborhood, while all the time there is a boy with a pin hook and an old hank of twine who is catching them so fast that he can't bait his hook, and the ground is white with them all around him.

I don't advocate violent language; but if there ever is an occasion when the ten commandments are temporarily suspended, this is it.

A man is legally entitled to relieve his pent up feelings, and the more so, because when he gets up to go home he finds that his fish hook has canght him by the shirt, and that there is a puddle deep enough to float a canal boat just where he has been sitting.

Of course you can't go home without fish, to be laughed at, so you go over and try to buy them of the boy, who not only tries to insult you by asking you if you "ketched any?" but feels that he has you in his power, and makes yon pay more money than you could buy out a whole oyster-sloop for.

No, I don't see any sport in it, and if I wanted to hurth his feelings, and break down his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him bis spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would get him his spirits and ruin his morals, I would shall have been sittly published in the late Mrs. Trollope's

I was a glass piece of general property, and everybody was on the most surprisingly intihate terms with me. A few public institutions had complimentary perceptions of corners in my mind, of which, after considerable self-examination, I have not discovered any indication. Neat little printed forms were addressed to those corners, beginengaged in a purshit (no matter what), which could be transacted by myself alone; in which I could have no help; which imposed a constant strain on the attention, memory, observation, and physical powers; and which involved an almost fabulous amount of change of place and rapid railway traveling. I had followed this pursuit through forms were addressed to those corners, beginning with the words: "I give and bequeath traveling. I had followed this pursuit through an exceptionally trying winter in an always trying climate, and had resumed it in England after but a brief repose. Thus it came to be prolonged until, at length—and, as it seemed, all of a sudden—it so wore me out that I could not rely, with, my usual cheerful confidence, upon myself to achieve the constantly recurring task, and began to feel (for the first time in my life) giddy, jarred, shaken, faint, uncertain of voice and sight and tread and touch, and dull of spirit. The medical advice I sought within a few hours was given in two Will it seem exaggerative to state my beli least vain-glorious of all the records upon this strange hy-leaf, was a letter from the self-deceived discoverer of the recondite secret "how to live four or five hundred years"? My intention was to interpose, as it were, a fly-leaf in the book of my life, in which nothing should be written from without for a brief season of a few weeks. But some very singular experiences, recorded themselves on this lar experiences, recorded themselves on this same fly-leaf, and I am going to relate them literally. I repeat the word: literally.

My first odd experience was of the remarkable coincidence between my case, in the general in ind, and one Mr. Merdle's as I find it relief to the credit system; and he has corded in a work of fiction called Little Dorsays: Last week, Rev. Dr. McHyaine, of Prince ton, delivered an inaugural address on the es-tablishment of a chair of Political Economy and Social Science in the University. Mr. economy, as well as an occasional author on the subject. His "Ways and Means of Pay-ment" is a learned review of the history and literature of the credit system; and he has written a great many pamphlets on this branch of science, and worked hard on the recent commission from which Mr. David Wells became the special commissioner. Mr. Colwell has col-lected with great care a large library of works on political economy—about ten thousand volumes—and probably so good At first, he was dead of all the diseases that ever were known, and of several brand-new maladies invented with the speed of Light to meet the demand of the occasion. He had concealed a dropsy from infancy, he had inherited a large estate of water on the chest from his grandfather, he had had an operation performed upon him every morning of his life for eighteen years, he had been subject to the explosion of important veins in his body after the manner of fireworks, he had had something the matter with his heart, he had had something the matter with his heart, he had had something the matter with his brain. Five hundred people who sat down to breakfast entirely uninformed on the whole subject, behundred people who sat down to breakfast turers here, and the professorship will begin entirely uninformed on the whole subject, believed before they had done breakfast, that reason of the vigorous efforts made in its l half. Annarolis, June 4.—The boat race, this afternoon, between the first and second classes of the Naval Academy, started at 5.30. The race was three miles. The boat of the first, or graduating class, was a six-oared cedar shell, and that of the second class a four-oared paper buoy, midway between this and the starting point, the boat of the first class swamped, and her competitor, coming in ahead, was decided the winner, and was awarded the flag, which was presented by Admiral Porter. Time, twenty-one minutes and thirty-three seconds.

After the boat race there was a mock naval fight between Midshipmen Kimball and May, of the gradusting class each compositing and of the graduating class, each commanding and manning a dugout, with a crew of one man as oursman and sculler. The weapons of the contestants were padded lances. The boats were placed about twenty yards apart, and at the word of command, started for each other.

At the first round, May went overboard, but soon got in his boat. In the second round, Kimball was knocked overboard, and in attempting to get in his boat, upset and sunk her, when he was gallantly rescued by May.

The crew, the two scullers, swam ashore.
