to day in a very simily decline in the railway list and a heavy drop in many of the miscellaneous shares. The bullish feeling seemed to be entirely without force, except for a brief spell in the earlier portion of the day, when prices were comparatively steady. The bear feeling, on the contrary, was contagious, and the lack of elasticity in the market this morning conduced to spread it. The lines which marked the division of the respective forces constituting the opposing parties of Wall street began to become indistinct, as one after another of the prominent cliques began to sell long stock, it they did not also go "short." As the hour approached for the closing of the Long Room the descrition of the bulls to their opponents ranks gave the latter an overwhelming prestice, and enabled them to utterly rout the remnant of their enemy's forces.
