THE HYSTERY OF NATURE. The works of God are fair for naught, Unless our eyes, in seeing, See hidden in the thing the thought The outward form is not the whole, Of every part is moulded Fo image forth an inward soul, That dimly is unfolded. The shadow, pictured in the lake ut every tree that trembles,

Is cast for more than just the sake Of that which it resembles. Because the meadows need it, But on an errand of its own, To human souls that need at The stars are lighted in the skies, Not merely for their shining, But, like looks of loving eyes, Have meanings worth divining. The waves that moan along the shore,
The winds that sigh in blowing,
Are sent to teach a mystic lore
Which men are wise in knowing.

The clouds around the mountain peak, The rivers in their winding, Have secrets which, to all who seek, Thus Nature dwells within our reach, But though we stand so near her, We will interpret half her speech, With ears too dull to hear her. Whoever, at the coarsest sound, Still listens to the finest, Shall hear the noisy world go round To music the divinest.

Whoever yearns to see aright Because his heart is tender, Shall catch a glimpse of heavenly light. In every earthly splendor. So, since the universe began, And till it shall be ended, The soul of nature, soul of man And soul of God are blended.

THE HALLOW-EVE MYSTERY. A Legend of the Black Hall. CHAPTER I.

THE BERNERS OF THE BURNING HEARTS "Their love was like the lava flood That burns in Etna's breast of flame." "Their lore was fike the lava food. they heard the sound of weeping—low, deep, heart-broken weeping.

Both paused, looked at each other, and listened.

The sound seemed to come from a room on the opposite side of the passage to their own apartment.

"What is that?" inquired Sybil, looking up to her husband's face.

"It seems to be some woman in distress," answered Lyon.

"Oh! see what it is, dear, will you?" enthe same instant, and stood dumb and motionless.

And now, at length, Lyon Berners spoke again.

"Sybil!" he said, "this house is yours! You tions, and was renowned for the scenes of welling.

She opened her bloodless lips, now paling in gayety and hospitality which had transpired beneath its roof.

Mrs. Berners, the last of her race, to give vent to the emotions of her restless, jealous heart, resolved to reinaugurate the festivities of the olden time, and for that purpose announced a mask hall for the ensuing All-Hallow Eve, and at once set about getting all things in readiness.

One day while she was absent at Blackville, making purchases, Lyon and Rosa became so absorbed in one another, as to become oblivious of the entry of Mrs. Winterose, the old housekeeper, who found them sitting closely side by side, her hand clasped in his. On Sybil's return, the old housekeeper described this scene to her, with many exaggerations.

She opened her bloodless lips, now paling in death, and gasped forth the words:

Sybil lad passed the day in the robbers den with her strange companion, who astonished her by stating that the rinasquerade. Late in the afternoon, dinner was announced, at which several of the robbers appeared, with Moloch, a gigantic ruffiah, at their head. All had heard the horrible accusation.
And all stood panic-stricken, as they shrank "Oh, my leart! my heart!" she moaned, turning deathly pale. And then, after a long silence, she bitterly added, "Deceived! Betrayed! Scorned! Laughed at! Well, well, since deceit is the fashion of the day, I too will be in the fashion; I too will wear a mask of smiles! But behind that mask I will watch! —Oh, how I will watch! Not at my fanoy-ball alone will I play a part, but before it, and perhaps, after it! None shall eyer know how I watch, what I see, until I descend with the fell swoop of the eagle. And henceforth let me remember that I am a daughter of the house of Berners, who never failed a friend or spared afoe: And oh, let the spirit of my fathers support me, for I must endure nutil I can

If Lyon Berners really meant this, or thought to bring his fiery-hearted wife to terms by the threat, he was mistaken in her character.

"Oh, go!" she answered, bitterly—"go as soon as you like, Lyon Berners: Good night, and—good-bye," she said, and with a wave of her hand she passed from the room.

He was mad to have spoken as he did; madder still to let her leave him so!—how mad he was soon to learn.

Lyon Berners remained walking up and "What place is this? Who are you? Why am I brought hither?"

Sybil was deeply moved by this lady's story, and insisted on taking Mrs. Blondelle home with her to Black Hall, and Mr. Berners gave his assent to her wishes.

But before they got ready to set out on their journey, Sybil bitterly repented of the arrangement. Mrs. Blondelle was so enchantingly lovely, that Mr. Berners at once began to yield to her charms; and Sybil, for the first itime, saw him pay the homage of admiration to other beauty than her own.

This kindled the fires of jealousy in her heart, and by the time they reached Black Hall, those fires had become fanned into an eachest with amazement and sorrow, he last the formulation of the hands of the constables, who are by this time in possession of the Haunted Chapel. But fear nothing! Him down the room some time longer. The lights were all out, and the servants gone to bed.
