Mushrooms.
The Morilla, a kind of mushroom, highly appreciated by epicures, has already appeared in French markets. It has the advantage over other mushrooms of being much more easily digested. It can be kept without losing any of its good qualities, and if, in drying, it diminsishes in volume, it returns when put to soak. In extensive establishments the Morilla is generally used as a garnish, but in the country, where we can have them always fresh, they can be dressed with cream, fried, spitted, stuffed, and also a l'italienne, which is the way I prefer them.

Morillas d'l'talienne.—Pick them by the stalk in taking out of the earth; split the largest in Broadway: in taking out of the earth; split the largest in two, and wash them carefully; then put them in taking out of the earth; split the largest in two, and wash them carefully; then put them to soak in warm water, moving them from time to time, so that the sand they usually contain may be entirely detached. When perfectly clean, take them from the water and drain them upon a napkin. Place then a saucepan over a very slow fire, containing a piece of butter, a little olive oil, parsley, young onions and a clove of garlic finely chopped, salt and pepper; as soon as the butter is melted, add the mushrooms, and let them cook very slowly. Duting this time toast a round slice of bread, butter it, and while still hot, pour the mushrooms over it, sprinkled with lemon juice or a dash of vinegar. Here then, the preparation is not elaborate, and the sucsulence extreme.

Turtle Soup.

"May I hope," writes a subscriber to me, "ever to read a recipe for real Turtle Soup?" I have sought in divers cook-books, but instead of turtle they speak only of calvest head. This seems to me very like a hare ragout."

It is not from America that French restauratears bring furtles for great occasions, but from Corsica, where they find the largest. To kill these heavy turtles they are turned on their backs, uneasiness makes them extend the neck, which is cut off with a blow from a butcher's knife, and then they are hung up until no more blood flows. Placed again on their back, a knife is passed between the lower and upper shell, not so deeply as to break the gall, the intestines are withdrawn, and the liver saved. The transparent sline always found is worthless; the rest is good to use. With smaller turtles they proceed in exactly the same manner.

Turtle Soup.—Cut the flesh of the turtle into pieces as large as a hazel nut, soak them, then cook in a good essence soup ("consomme"), with onions, carrots, pot-herbs, pepper and spices, for three or four hours, over a slow fire; add two or three glasses of Madeira wine, or any similar kind, and serve in a turreen. I have found this the most simple way to make furtle soup. to make furtle soup. RICE STEW.

"Gigot with Seven Roots."

The season is a little advanced for preparing a "shoulder of mutton with seven roots," but it is good thus prepared, and its aspect so majestic, that for lear of forgetting I give the recipe now which isso precious to housekeepers: Shoulder of Mutton with Seven Roots (Vegetables).—Take the bone from a shoulder of mutton, lard it inside with thick strips of pork, roll it in salt, pepper and chopped parsley; season with salt, pepper, bay leaf and a little thyme; roll it up lengthwise and tie it; put at the bottom of a saucepan some strips of pork, the trimmings and bones of the shoulder, and at last the shoulder itself; cover it with a little salt pork; add onions, carrots, turnips, parsnips, two or three stalls of celery, salsify, artichokes, if you have them, and a bunch of pot herbs: cook with a slow fire above and below for fully three hours. Being done by this time, take out the shoulder, untie it, set it in an oval dish, surround it with the vegetables, skim the gravy, and pour it over the whole.

I give two recipes for preparing eggs in the I give two recipes for preparing eggs in the

Another Recipe.—Put fresh eggs into boiling water, and leave them on the fire; after three minutes they will be "milky," and after four minutes they will be "soft"—that is to say, good ASPARAGUS-DUTCH SAUCE. Asparagus is the earliest vegetable of the season; it is also the vegetable, par excellence; its taste is equisite, and its hygienic virtues inestimable. It possesses, to be sure, diuretic effects sadly odorous, but as a few drops of tur-effects sadly odorous, but as a few drops of turpentine transform these to extract of Parma violets; we cannot consider it a crime. The difference between asparagus well or badly cooked, is immense. I advise housekeepers to note well the following prescription:

Asparagus with White Sauce.—Select asparagus with the stalk very white and the heads purple; slit the head a little way down; scrape the stalks one by one with a knife, and cut them all the same length; tie them in little bunches and cook them in boiling salt water, where they need remain only a few minutes: asparagus ought to be tender, but sufficiently brittle for the head to break easily. When cooked, take it from the boiling water and plunge it quickly into cold water, withdrawing it immediately, which renders it firm; drain an instant, turn it out on a napkin in a dish, ranging the heads all one way, and in a dish, ranging the heads all one way, and serve with drawn butter or Dutch sauce. Here is the recipe for Dutch sauce:

is the recipe for Dutch sauce:

Dutch Sauce Simplified.—Put a quarter of a pound of good butter into a saucepan, with a spoonful of good flour; stir with a wooden spoon so as to form a paste; incorporate the yolks of five eggs, one after another, and the juice of one lemon. Upon the care with which this amalgamation is made depends the success of the operation. Season with salt, penner, and grated nuture; add a glass of pepper, and grated nutneg; add a glass of water; stir well and set the saucepan on the fire. When the sauce begins to foam, draw the saucepan to a corner of the range; beat it until it is perfectly smooth, and let it keep hot. At the moment of serving add another quarter pound of butter, heating the sauce anew, and you will thus obtain the most savory Dutch Cabinet Pudding.—Mix in a turreen ten volks of eggs, a quarter pound of powdered sugar, a glass of milk, and nearly the same quantity of kirsch-wasser, then strain it. Pick and take the seed from a quarter pound of Malaga raisins. Pick, wash and dry between two cloths the same quantity of currants, cut 3 preserved apricots into small squares, and divide in half i of a lb. of candied cherries. Butter a cylindrical mould, place a layer of the fruit at bottom about half an inch thick. Cover this with a layer of Savoy biscuits, then another layer of fruit, and so on until the mould is two-thirds full, finishing with the fruit. Pour this composition slowly into the mould, set it in hot water without boiling; turn it out and serve with sauce like that for the Matzoth-Kouguel, given below.

The Matzoth-Kouquel Pudding is a renowned lewish dish, for which some inspired epicures eg me to procure a recipe.

Matzoth-Koungel.—Soak six whole matzoths cakes of unleavened bread) in water for five or six hours; then drain them. To this moistened bread add a pound of suet, chopped fine, a pound of sugar or honey, a dozen eggs, a flavor of lemon, a little powdered cunnamon, and work the whole with a wooden spoon. Then grease a sauceman pour the composition and work the whole with a wooden spoon. Then grease a saucepan, pour the composition into it, and cook slowly for six or seven hours.

After it's done, turn it out in a dish and serve it in the following sauce: Mix in a saucepan the yolk of eight eggs, with a spoonful of fecula, add a quarter pound of sugar, as much fresh butter, a little salt, and halt a bottle of Malaga wine. Stir this savents fire, and when thick enough strain it through a sieve and serve. Half of this sauce is poured

CHAMPION SAFES. Unsuccessful Burglary. LETTER OF MESSES, DAVID DOWS & CO. . 1167 A D New York, April 10, 1869.

HERRING, FARREL & SHERMAN, No. 25 GENTS: On the night of the 22d ult, our store, No. 20 South street, was entered, and a desperate attempt made by burglars upon one of your safes in our counting-room. The key to the safe in which we kept our securities was locked inside of our fire-proof book-safe, the doors of which were literally cut to pieces; from this they obtained the key to the other safe and opened it. Fortunately we had one of your Burglar-Proof Bankers' Cliests inside, in which our valuables were deposited. This they went to work at with a will, and evidently used up all their time and tools in vain attempts to force it. The night was dark and stormy, and the fact of their knowing where our key was kept shows that their plans were well matured. They tried wedging the door and body of the Chest, and the faithful sale bears evidence of the labor and skill devoted to the work. All was useless, and it is with great satisfaction we report that inpon opening it we found our securities all safe, and can therefore cheeffully indorse the Burgular-Proof, work recommended by you. You will please send the new safe purchased by us to our counting-house, and take the old one to show that some safes are still manufactured worthy of the name. DAVID DOWS & Co.
