DEMOCRATIC VIRTUE.

There is a possibility of some few innocent and unsuspecting citizens being gulled by the markable professions of public virtue which are being so industriously set forth by our present police authorities. To those who are in the habit of weighing such professions by the standards of precedent and common sense. these bids for popularity are of most transparent shallowness. Nothing is more absurdly inphilosophical than to suppose that modern Democracy, politically rotten as it is to its very core, has anddenly become virtuous by reason of its nartial and very equivocal successes in this city. There is nothing in the mere possession of power to convert a party which attained that power by the grossest outrages upon law that ever disgraced the polls of Philadelphia, from its unprincipled partisanship to anything like a regard for public morals or the public in-

Three weeks ago, the Chief of Police issued an order to his force, couched in sufficiently exalted language, and commanding his subordinates to abstain from all intermeddling with local politics. The police were not to go to conventions: neither were political placards to be posted in station-houses; subjects might provoke discussion. Within which is the ticket.

Now the unsuspecting citizen who reads this had arrived, and that there had actually been some wonderful conversion wrought among the "fierce Democracie." He might question whether this was the identical party which

The public might be humbugged to some extent by such tricks as those by which the snave and amiable Mr. Fox is just now turning all things to the one glorious purpose of winning popularity, were it not that there are still a good many chinks through which glimpses may be had of the internal machinery of the police department, and of the secret springs by means of which all this display of vigor is worked for the amusement and deception of the public.

Two or three facts have come to light within the last few days, which will serve to open the eyes of the unwary to the truth. We stated one of these facts on Saturday, after satisfying ourselves of its truth. The new police have been admonished, in a form sufficiently official to reach the force generally, that, in order to improve their minds and keep them well advised of the progress of events and of the duties that belong to them as Democratic police, they will be expected,--not required, of course,—to subscribe for the Age. We are believers in a system of enforced education. We think everybody in this land ought be be compelled to read and write and to improve his mind. The Age has probably been selected for the instruction of the police on account of the general purity of its English, and its careful avoidance of all political discussions. The Democratic policeman does not want argument; he wants downright dogma. He wants to be trained to that steadiness of discipline which will enable him to stick to his post at all and future purposes. The Metropolitan Police Sharswood's party mainly relies for its success. bill had to be defeated at Harrisburg, last This law is absolutely needed in the city, and Spring, and it had to be done twice. it is not needed in the country. Philadelphia Money Market. MONDAT, June 21, 1869.-Our money market is without ny new element of change. It is a little close, but no pproach to stringency is apparent, and as long as the resent conservative feeling in stocks continues, no ap-reheasion need be chiertained as to the future condition of the market. It is reported now that Secretary Bout-well will, in future, purchase bonds to the whole extent of his gold sales, and thus terminate his policy of locking up greenbacks, which is the chief, if not the only cause of the recent money panic in New York and elsewhere. The Financial Chronicle, of New bonds and other securities, and discounts are cent for first-class paper. The Government bond market is dull and weak. Gold opened and closed at 136% at noon.
