Sardines and Devilled Meats, Mr. Forster, the author of the well-known biography of Goldsmith, has had the most ample material for the composition of this work placed at his disposal, and has produced a narrative of rare literary interest and importance. As a poet and a prose writer, Landor's great merits have not been fully appreciated either in this country or in England, though his influence on the literary mind of his sine has been marked. Yet the range of contemporary English poetry does not embrace anything finer than many of his lyries and meditative poems. His prose is more widely known, especially the "Imaginary Conyersations." PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS. The Republican State Convention GOV. GEARY NOMINATED

The delegates to the Republican State Convention for the nomination of candidates for Governor and a Justice of the Supreme Court assembled this morning in Concert Hall. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting. The portion set apart for spe was well filled. Hon. G. A. Grow, Chairman of the State Central Committee, called the Convention to order at half-past 10 o'clock. He addressed BPEECH OF HON. G. A. GROW.

Gentlemen of the Convention: Before it is devolved upon the duty incident to the position assigned me, allow one word of congratulation on the auspices under me the duty incident to the position assigned me, allow me ene word of congratulation on the auspices under which you meet.

One year ago the people of this country were entering one of the most vital political contests of their history. It was to be the last, the closing scene of the bloody drama of eight years, in which great principles were to be settled forever in the institutions of our country. In that struggle the Republicans of Penneylvania led the forlorn hope and bore the banner of victory in October. Around that banner cluster the memories of all that we hold most dear and sacred in that decade of our history. That banner represents to-day the unity of the Republican the perpetuity of its institutions, an enlarged; noble patriotism, and a humanity as broad as the race.

The Republican party is young in years, but old in its ideas and mighty in its grand achievements. On the 30th of May, 1844, Congress, under the control of the Democratic party, repealed the Missouri Compromise, and conacted what was known as the Kansas and Nebraska bill. The devotece of human bondare though by this act to secure its perpetuity, and were forth with fire and every least it all the Terretee of the wind in the security of the life. bill. The devotees of human bondage thought by the act to secure its perpetuity, and went forth with fire and sword to plant it in all the Territories of the Union. Fifteen years have passed away, and the sun, in its course across the continent from occan to ocean, no longer rises on the master or sets on the slave. [Applause.]

on the master of sets on the slave. [Applause.]

These mighty achievements allow every man beneath the flag of our country to stand up in the dignity of manhood and proclaim to the world, "I.too,am a man!" the flag of our country to stand up in the dignity of manhood and proclaim to the world, "I.too,am a man!" These mighty achievements are by the organization you represent. The darkness of human bondage, struggling against the enlightenment of the age, sent our sons and brothers to the battle-field to uphold the institutions of our lathers, and three hundred thousand of them sleep in the soldlers' graves. This is the sacrifice we have made, while sorrow site by every fireside mourning the unreturned braves. This is the sacrifice the generation of to-day has made to secure the perpetuity of our institutions and the blessings of liberty bequeathed by our fathers. No thanks to the organization that you oppose that to-day we have a country to love and a Union to revere. Had the destines of the country been entrusted to them the flag of our fathers to-day would have been dragged in the dust, torn and tattered. Gentlemen of the Convention, you meet now to perform another important duty, not only to this party you represent, but to the great interests of the country. You are to select to-day the standard-bearer for the contest that closes in October next; and this keystone State is to engage now as then in that contest in which is heard the din and clash of ideas. For, remember, although the war of arms is no longer heard, yet the clash of ideas goes on. You battle on the same line; but though your organization comprises but a few years, and was called into existence to uphold the broad principles of liberty, your great mission to-day is to confirm and develop the great interests of the country. And during this din of battle you have realized the idea of Columbus, and our countrymen go westward to-day to meet the Indias. All these associations cluster around carrie you have realized the idea of Columbus, as our countrymen go westward to-day meet the Indias. All these associations cluster arous ruis party, who are now yet in the foreground of the table; and your standard-bearer, whoever he may he, to lead the hosts of freenicm—the men who have met the hosts of slavery to save the country—and who, in the political struggle of one year ago, saved the party which you represent.

[From the New York Herald of to-day.]

Tussay, June 22.—The fact is definitely settled that there will be not change in the present programme of gold sales and bond purchases by the government before the latter of July, when the new fiscal year will begin. Secretary Boutwell was known to be in Washington, and hence the discredit of the rumor, in the street last night, which was subsequently verified, that he would so modify his policy on and after the lat proximo as to provide for the sale of less fhan two millions of gold weekly. The sletter of instructions on the subject, it will be noticed, is signed by the acting Secretary of the Trensury, instead of by Mr. Boutwell, who passed through the city to-day in returning from his Eastern tour. The letter referred to is addressed to the Assistant Treasurer, Mr. Van Dyck, and Rays.

In the pursuit of some commercial scheme Kennedy and clare. some commercial scheme Kennedy and C steamer Quaker City without passports, leaving his friend Kennedy to follow in the nex vessel with these documents. Kennedy did so On arriving at Havana he could find no trace of Clay. The captain of the Quaker City is of Clay. The captain of the Quaker City is certain that he saw Clay leave his ship in the small boat to go ashore, as is usual, since which hour he has not been spen nor heard from. He had on his person sufficient funds for ordinary expenses—say $1,000 or $1,500, bills of exchange on the Barings of London to the amount of $4,000 or $5,000, and letters of credit to more than $10,000. Neither of these have been presented for payment. Clay was well become than $10,000. Neither of these have been presented for payment. Clay was well known to merchants and business men in Hayana. The American Consul, who knew him sufficiently well to recognize him, is confident that he is not among those arrested and thrown into Morro Castle. There is no suspicion that he has dishonestly concealed himself, or else he would have first realized on his credits. The only tangible theory apart from that of arrest, and, perchance, execution, during the political troubles at Hayana, is that he started for Matanzas, where his acquaintance once with the American Consul would enable him to escape any difficulty arising from a want of passport, and that he was murdered by the boatmen for his ready cash. This disappearance should receive more attortion than has hitherto been given it.

London, June 23.—A deputation of gentlemen, representing the Lancashire Cotton trade, have united in a request to the Duke of Argyle to obtain government assistance in the production of cotton in the British Colonies. They set forth the great depression in trade at present, and show that relief can only be had by the government lending aid, to enable India to develop the growing of cotton, so as to compete with the United States.

Throughout the State of Kansas great excitement exists. The papers are calling upon the people to carry on a war of extermination. Unless this feeling subsides, and cooler counsels prevail, the chances are not favorable for keeping the Indians throughout that State from going on the war-path. On the whole, the present aspect of the Indian question is decidedly favorable for peace.
