Church nearly a quarter of a century ago.

The lightning yesterday was exceedingly vivid. Persons informed us they could hear vivid. Persons informed us they could hear it hissing,—the thunder was appalling, the hall very severe, finishing with rain that fell in torrents, so much so, that the whole locality for several miles was inundated. The paved sections of the streets in a few minutes presented rivers of water; and, although the tide was pretty high in the Delaware at the time, yet the culverts and surface drains prevented any cellars from being overflowed. The inhabitants in the eastern part of the First Ward were thrown into the greatest consternation, as crashing into the greatest consternation, as crashing roofs and falling chimneys and whirling trees added terrors to the elemental war. Such a scene beggars description. We may state here that the terror description is the state of the that the tornadoseemed to diverge from a common centre, and formed two tracks or courses, one about northeast and the other nearly east. We traced these courses for nearly half a mile. The following is the result of our investiga-

The car-house of the Frankford and Southwark Passenger Railway, on the west side of Fifth street, near Canal street, was almost entirely demolished. Those who were in the east end of the car-house at the time said there was a blinding flash of lightning, and, as the thunder was about being heard, a terrific thunder was about being heard, a termic crash ensued, and the next moment a hundred feet of the building lay in ruins. In falling, the fences of yards in the rear of dwelling-houses were smashed to the ground, and three or four outhouses were more or less damaged.

A couple of two-story brick dwellings being erected by Mr. Dunbar, on a small street just south of the car-house, were crushed into a mass of shapeless ruins. Further south, on Fifth street, below Mifflin, the pretty residence of Mr. Jacob Meyers was unroofed in a moment. Mrs. Meyers, at the time, was sitting near the third story front window, and so quickly was the operation of the wind executed that she did not know the roof was off until she saw it the pextmoment falling into a

From this point the tornado seems to have taken an easterly direction, and in its course prostrated two chimneys on the western end of prostrated two chimneys on the western end of Sharp & Thompson's wire works, formerly "North, Chase & North's." Two chimneys, left standing, are about one hundred and fifty-feet apart, thus showing the whirling power of the wind within that space.

Further towards the eastern part of these works one of the buildings was entirely unroofed, and the flying timbers fell partly into Second street and partly into the Philadelphia Skating Park.

The fence of the Park, with the exception of one panel in Second street, was entirely de-molished.

A large tree that had braved the storms of a century was uprooted and whirled to the distance of a few rods, immediately east of the Park. The buildings of this institution were not damaged. The large iron skate, on the top of the flag pole, was blown to parts unknown.

Siegel street, east of Moyameusing avenue, was visited with destruction. On the south side of the street there is a row of two-story brick houses, the property of Mr. Daniel Fitzatrick. The two westernmost buildings of the row were unroofed and the cornice splintered into pieces. A piece of joist or rafter was hurled across the street, and coming rafter was hurled across the street, and coming in contact with the upper part of house No. 243, occupied by Mr. Tolman, broke in the window-shutter, sash and frame and a considerable portion of the wall. House No. 241, adjoining, occupied by Mr. Gardiner, and house No. 239, the dwelling of Mrs. Long, lost their chimneys, but escaped other damages. Further towards the Delaware the destruction of property were still greater. On the meadow below the old Southwark Canal, and a short distance west of Greenwich Point a short distance west of Greenwich Point road, were the works of Messrs Tasker & road, were the works of Messis, Tasker & Clark, for the manufacture of phosphates for fertilization, &c. In this locality there is a nest of three-story In this locality there is a nest of three-story brick houses—seventeen in number. The front row is known as the "Eleven-gun battery," with wingseach containing three houses. The southern wing was entirely unroofed, and part of the rear walls and chimneys went crashing into the yards, smashing fences, hencops and pig-pens. several boat-houses that belong to rail and reed bird shooters. All the dwelling houses are occupied by poor people, who fortunately escaped injury, excepting one poor old colored woman—a Mrs. Bechtel. She was going up stairs into the third story at the time of the disaster. The chimney in falling involved her in the ruins. She received a pretty severe cut

Further down, in the more rural section, there are many interesting evidences of the power of the storm. Extensive cabbage patches or fields were stripped of their leaves just as clean as though they had been removed by the use of sharp knives.

The barn or wagon-house of Mr. Bliss, on old

The fences were also prostrated.

The rear portion of the roof of the Presbyterian Church, on Greenwich street, east of Moyamensing avenue, was torn up and destroyed by the wind. The damage here, however, was not very extensive.

The above are the principal points or traces left by the whirlwind on the extreme part of its course or courses. As may be supposed, the people residing in the section thus alluded to were thrown into the greatest excitement. A portion of the tor-nado passed over a thickly-populated locality. The storm lasted about ten minutes, and after the hail had ceased to fall, the rain came down in such torrents as to assume all the pro-portions of a regular water-spout. BEATING AND CUTTING.—Reaner Etenfield was before Alderman Carpenter this morning upon the charge of the state of Benjamin Smith, No.533 South Front street, where both men resided. Etenfield was drunk and was smashing furniture. When remonstrated with he attacked Sotterblum, and, as is alleged, beat him about the head and cut his arm with a knife. He was sent to BADLY INJURED .- James Rusk and Alex-

This is rendered necessary from the fact that all of Sprague's property is in this city.

Class Day at Harvard

Boston, June 26.—Class Day at Harvard.

Boston, June 26.—Class Day at Harvard is the important day of the year with the students, and the people in this vicinity who take a lively interest in the venerable institution are becoming less familiar and less interested with Commencement Day each year, and are directing their attention to the class exercises. Yesterday the observance of the Class Day of '69 was an occasion of much interest, several thousand relatives and acquaintances of the students being in attendance, scores thousand relatives and acquaintances of the students being in attendance, scores of distinguished gentlemen and numerous ladies, gaily dressed, giving colat to the event by their presence. A marked improvement in the appearance of the ladies was apparent, as they were dressed less gaudily and with more taste than has been observed of late years. All was life and animation on the college grounds restardly morning. The members of grounds yesterday morning. The members of the senior class were collected at 10 o'clock in front of Holworthy Hall, and the visitors were arriving by thousands in carriages and cars. The college buildings looked as venerable and stately as of old, and here and there promenaded gay throngs of happy and smiling people, who gave a holiday look to the whole picture. The Senoir Class was marshaled by Edward Bowditch, John Wayland McBurney, and Gardner Goodrich Willard, and marched to Appleton Goodrich Willard, and marched to Appleton Chapel, wherein William Hunter Orcutt, the class chaplain, offered an appropriate prayer. At a later hour the literary exercises took place at the First Parish Church. The church was crowded, and the programme included a prayer by the Rev. Dr. Peabody, an oration by Francis G. Peabody, of Boston, a poem by George E. Merrill, of Cambridge, and the singing of an ode written by Arthur noem by George E. Merrill, of Cambridge, and the singing of an ode written by Arthur Irving Fiske, of Holliston. As intellectual efforts, the oration, poem, and ode were creditable to the young graduates. The oration and poem were well delivered and well received, and in fact it could hardly be otherwise for the students have an understanding wise, for the students have an understanding among themselves, that whenever the orator or poet forgets his "piece," or falters in the least, they are to applaud till he collects his scattered faculties, and either quietly makes up his mind to repeat the obstructive paragraph or omit it altogether, and continue from another point. another point.

After the exercises came the "spreads," to which hosts of friends were invited, and at which one of the items was 2,000 boxes of which one of the items was 2,000 boxes of strawberries. The dancing on the College Green was begun at 4 o'clock. The members of the class were arrayed in the usual miscellaneous manner, and gave Holworthy and the other buildings which they visited the customary cheers. At the library the class ivy was planted, and an excellent oration was delivered by Benjamin L. R. Tower. It may be here stated that the ivy thus planted each year invariably dies, a fact which may be interesting to students of thus planted each year invariably thes, a fact which may be interesting to students of natural history or horticulturists. The exercises at the tree followed, and the lack of rudeness, noticeable in former years, was noteworthy. The pulling and hauling incidental to the formation of circles by the classes around the trees was not particularly agreeable to visitors, though it was heartily enjoyed by the students. Usually there is a grand by the students. Usually there is a grand rush for the bouquets on the tree, and while one student gets one or six, and spoils two or three, somebody else goes without. Yester-day a Committee took down the bouquets. and passed them around, so that each member of the Senior Class received one as a perishable memento of the day's sport. The nembers of the International Crew, who had been the lions of the day in a quiet way, were brought prominently to notice at the tree by the "hoisting" process. The six-oared boat which did such good service with the Univer-sity crew at Worcester, in the Ward and Yale races last year, was suspended in Harvard Hall during the day, decked with the trophies of the victory over Yale.

the victory over Yale.

In the evening there were private entertainments of fortunate friends, singing by the Harvard Glee Club, and a reception at the Rev. Dr. Peabody's. Holworthy Hall and the Green were brilliantly illuminated, and hundreds of people enjoyed vocal and instrumental music till a late hour. The member of the Senior Class reported highest was Robert Alder. Class who stood highest was Robert Alder McLeod, of Baltimore, Md., who was a cap-tain in the rebel army, and who lost an arm while serving in that capacity. He accepts the situation gracefully, and is one of the most popular men in the College. Commencement day is Tuesday next.—Tribune.

FIRE-PROOF SAFES.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB HERRING'S PATENT FRANKLINITE BANKER'S CHEST.

> THE REAL TEST! BURGLARS FOILED!

PERRYVILLE STATION, PENNA. R. R.,

MESSRS. FARREL, HERRING & CO., No. 679 CHESTNUT Street, Philadelphia. GENTS-A persistent but unsuccessful effort was made on the night of May 29, 1869, to drill the Bankers' Chest received from you a few months ago.

From facts that have come to our knowledge, it is evident that the attempt to open it was renewed on Sunday evening following. Finding all efforts to drill it use-less, the effort was then made to break the lock. The lummering was heard by parties in the neighborhood for soveral hours, but supposing it to arise from the railroad men replacing a defective-rail, excited no alarm & The tools, with the exception of the drills, were loft. It is evident that they were not only prepared, but perfectly familiar with the construction of your Chest. That they failed is another evidence that your Bankers' Chests are what you claim for them-Burglar Respectfully yours,

J. BALSBACK, Agent.
