Partial Failure of the Last Expedition-Interesting Statement. The New York Herald of this morning tells he following story: The unfortunate possibility of the failure of The unfortunate possibility of the failure of Saturday night, which left this port on Saturday night, which was hinted at yesterday, has indeed been realized, and has overbalanced the dozen probabilities of success which are alluded to in the same article, for the enterprise has collapsed and the plan has failed disastrously. Among the men who, departed on the expedition was one William C. Leech, of this city, residing on Sixth avenue, who, together with some companions, returned to New York yesterday. Mr. Leech furnishes the following: the following:

STATEMENT.

"On Saturday night last we rendezvoused at Second avenue and Sixty-second street, about seven o'clock P. M. We left the rendezvous and embarked at the foot of Sixty-second street, East River, having on board 116 men, besides about sixty native Cubans. We went thence on board the steamer to Jones' Wood, thence on board the steamer to Jones' Wood, where we took on board about twenty-five more men. We were on the tug boat H. D. Cool, and accompanied by the steamboat W. H. Webb. We sailed up and down the river for about an hour and a half. The Webb came to us with Colonel Ryan on board, in disguise. We then sailed up as far as Hart's Island, and were compelled to come to an anchor in consequence of a dense fog. At seven o'clock on Sunday morning we weighed anchor and started up to the head of Long Island Sound, and arrived at Gardiner's Island, where the steamer James R. Whiting was to meet the expedition. On Sunday night was to meet the expedition. On Sunday night the steamer John Chase arrived, with 215 of oarmen, under command of Colonel Currier The Whiting had not arrived, and the officers held a consultation. Not finding any steamer, as we expected to do, we searched for her for four hours, but could not find her. We then came to anchor until seven o'clock on came to anchor until seven o'clock on Monday morning, when we made another search for the Whiting until nine o'clock. Our provisions and water gave out, and the steamboat Cool started for New London, Conn., for provisions, with Colonel Byrne's, men on board. They reached New London at six o'clock P. M., and several men—at least thirty—there left the vessel. The steamer Cool got extra provisions, and started back. I was one of those who came back to this city, leaving of those who came back to this city, leaving the vessel, and coming down by the regular passenger boat. At about half-past two o'clock this (Tuesday) morning records. passenger boat. At about half-past two o'clock this (Tuesday) morning passengers on the boat report that they saw a steamer taking men on board from two boats; they were distinguished only by the lights; and, therefore, it may not have been any part of the expedition. The steamer taking them on board was supposed to have been the Quaker City."

It will be seen from this extrement that there

It will be seen from this statement that there is a possibility of the embarkation of some of the men—two steamer loads—on board some other vessel, but reports received late last night—too late to be given in detail—would rather tend to confirm the belief that the exedition has failed altogether. It was rumored hat some of the men had landed at New Haven and that some desertions took place

One thing, however, is certain, and that is that one of the men most implicitly trusted by the leading officers of the expedition, and acting in a confidential capacity in the convey-ance of messages from one officer to another, turned traitor to the patriot cause and gave the information to the Marshal which enabled information to the Marshal which enabled him to make the seizure of the steamer Catharine. Whiting. This man's name is known, and, unfortunately, he is understood to be an American by birth, although not evidently by instinct or sympathies, if the popular feeling is comprehended on this question of Cuban independence.

At one o'clock this morning no arrests had been made, according to any information received by the officials at Ludlow street jail; but it is well known that some of the men had

THE ADMINISTRATION.

The Vice President on Its Success. Mr. Colfax made a long speech in Provi-dence, on Monday, from which we extract the following just eulogy of President Grant's Although I shall not transgress the bounds and speak in regard to any mere partisan issue of the day, I rejoice with you that you have an administration in power at Washington, and I allude now to your President, which to the great country. I were her those petty bickerings about the distribution of patronage, with the single remark that if he had been inspired he could not have satisfied the one-tenth of those who desired to serve the public in its offices of honor or of profit. That is but a slight ripple upon the wave; for when you look at the administhe wave; for when you look at the administration that is given to you, you find already shining out upon it, in letters of glittering light, that word which you have longed to see in—high—places—at—Washington—that word which goes to your heart—and that is, honesty, which is the corner-stone upon which the policy of the administration is securely grounded. You know that whether the President has made this man necknoster, or that sident has made this man postmaster or that man collector, or whether he has distributed this vast patronage just exactly as you, or I, or anybody else would have desired to have it distributed, you know that in that heart which beats in his bosom there is no thought except for the country.

And you know, besides, that you can see And you know, besides, that you can see written upon the portals of the White House that other word which you have longed for in years past to see, and that is, economy in the public service. You know that every expenditure is being cut down which can be consistently in the public service; that in every possible way the burdens upon the public are being reduced as far as can be consistently withour public credit in the payment of our with our public credit in the payment of our public debt, as the party that governs this country intends it shall be paid, to the uttermost dollar. And you know, besides, that hereafter it shall not be as in recent years of the past, that the honest taxpayer shall be convolled to hear his own buylens and the compelled to bear his own burdens and the burden of dishonest parties.

Nor is this all. Standing as we do among the nations of the world, emerging from our recent crisis, in which we had to fight not only the rebellion with its power, but to endure the frown of almost the entire world besides—for frown of almost the entire world besides—for the monarchical nations looked at this republic as a standing protest against their form of gov-ernment, and would rejoice to see it crumble to ruin—you know, to-day, that your Presi-dent, in speaking for you, and in your behalf, to the other nations of the world, speaks with no uncertain voice, but with an emphasis that demands and receives respect.

A WICKED PLOT IN GEORGIA EX-POSED.

Letter from a Colored Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. {From the Atlanta New Era,June 25.] Below we publish an extract from a letter, received yesterday from a colored minister in Harris county. We give the extract in his own crude language, which is sufficiently plain to convey the writer's whole meaning, and it bears the impress of truth upon every line of it. This letter exposes a scheme—of which we have several times before had an inkling—which is almost too wicked and abhorrent to obtain credence. Yet we are forced to believe obtain credence. Yet we are forced to believe that there are men who are bad enough to desire even this method of stirring up strife and insurrection, for the purpose of producing a state of affairs in Georgia which will precipitate the enactment of some extreme and stringent measures, in regard to Georgia, by the next session of Congress. The plot has been conducted with a greater degree of secrecy than ever beclouded the purposes of the infamous Ku Klux organization.

The following is the letter referred to:

WHITESYILLE, Harris county, Ga., June 20, 1869.—Dr. Bard: I am a Methodist preacher.

WHITESVILLE, Harris county, Ga., June 20, 1869.—Dr. Bard: I am a Methodist preacher. I belong to the mother church. I occasionally travel over the four adjoining counties. The colored people are doing better than they have done since freedom. We live in peace with the white folks. But I heard of a darkey the other day who was travelling through the country telling the colored people that a white man in Atlanta fold him to go through the man in Atlanta told him to go through the country and tell all the darkies that if they could get up a fight with the white folks they could get the State out of the Union, and Bul-lock would give us all forty acres of land and a mide. They say this fellow told them not to hit first; if they did it would ruin everything. But he said we had lived with white folks long enough to know how to make them mad, and enough to know how to make them mad, and when they hit for us to pitch in.

"I want you to warn all such folks to stay out of Harris county if they know what is good for them. We are in the Union, and want to stay there. I want my race to hold office, if the people give it to them, if they are qualified for it. I want to see them sit on the jury. And I want peace, too. We have got that in our section, and I believe General Grant will see to it that we get our rights. I believe more than that; I believe that in less than two years the whites here will be as willthan two years the whites here will be as willing for us to have it as the President is himself. Why, sir, they are helping us now, with our churches and with our schools. I don't know how the white folks do in other places, but I know there has been a mighty change through here. Frank Joseph."

PINE TREES.

Their Effect in Drying the Surrounded Soil. It is now pretty well known that woods and forests of leafy trees promote rainfall, and nourish the flow of springs and of rivers; but it is not so well known that trees of the kind described by the Germans as Nadelholzneedlewood-produce the contrary effect. That such is the fact, however, appears from a statement which will be read with interest by owners of waste lands. The forest of St. Amand, situated in the north of the district of Valenciennes, comprising 1,800 acres of silicious sand mixed with a small quantity of clay, was formerly covered with scrub, and stunted clumps of oak and birch, and being in places damp, was much haunted by snipe. In 1843 this unproductive growth was cleared off, and Scotch firs (Pinus sylvestris) were planted. These throve well, and are now tall handsome trees adoring the waste. But during their growth it was observed that the damp places became dry; the snipes abandoned the locality; then two or three springs and a small stream that once flowed through the covert dwindled away, and at last entirely disappeared. Here was a surprise! The forestal functionaries set to work to discover, if possible, the explanation. They dug trenches six feet deep on the site of the springs, and made borings to greater depths. The trenches disclosed no appearance of water but showed that the roots of the firs, as also those of the former oaks and birches, had penetrated six feet or more into the soil. By the borings two underlying beds of water, one of considerable volume, were discovered; and the natural inference was that they had formerly stood at a higher level, and thereby maintained the springs; but in what way their level had been lowered by the growth of the firs was a question which could not then be answered nor has a satisfactory answer yet been arrived at. The fact, however, remains, that trees included among the Pinus tribe exert a desiccating influence on the soil; and in the discussion occasioned by what has taken place in the forest of St. Amond, it has been mentioned that many of the lagoons, on the south-west coast of France have been dried up and converted into woods by planting the maritime pine along their margins, and advancing the planting as the waters receded. Is there anything in these foreign facts that can be turned to account here at home? In the recently published Report of the Commission appointed to inspect fortifications an account was given of the exceeding difficulty the builders had in finding a solid foundation for the forts at the marshy mouth of the Medway, and on the approaches to Chatham. Deep excavations were dug, but for a long time whatever was built showed a tendency to sink down out of sight; and even now that the forts do uprear their faces their stability is not absolute. Rightly do the natives of the district name the river the "Mudway." But if the marshy shores of Gascony can be dried up by plantations of pine trees, cannot the same be done on the marshy shores of Kent? If it can, the benefit will be manifold. The ground will be made firm and dry, ague will disappear, the country within will be sheltered, and the landscape

BURGLARS FOILED:

PERRYVILLE STATION, PENNA. R. R. . . June 12, 1869. MESSRS. FARREL, HERRING & CO., No. 629 CHESTNUT Street, Philadelphia.

GENTS-A persistent but unsuccessful effort was made on the night of May 29, 1869, to drill the Bankers Chest received from you a few months ago. From facts that have come to our knowledge, it is evident that the attempt to open it was renewed on Sunday evening following. Finding all efforts to drill it us less, the effort was then made to break the lock. The hammering was heard by parties in the neighborhood for several hours, but supposing it to arise from the raticoad men replacing a defective rail, excited no alarm. The tools, with the exception of the drills, were left. It is evident that they were not only prepared, but perfectly familiar with the construction of your Chest. That they failed is another evidence that your Bankers' Chests are what you claim for them-Burglar-Respectfully yours.
