The Master's address was then delivered by Railph M. Townsend, M. D., of the class of July, 1864. He said:

Ju cars and steambouts, or swiftly marching down the country roads.

They lost their individuality in the huge armies which received them, but their separate records are none the less glorious. At the close of the war some came back with sunburned faces, and marked with insignia of higher rank than when they departed. Some came back pullid and suffering. Some never came back; but to-day, in Southern valleys, the glided grain and bright inted flowers waft the sweet fragrance of their cherished memories. One of our classmates, Andrew Ware, offered up his life at Petersburg, just as the war was dying away, in a sullen murmur of artillery roar.

A year after our graduation the national banner again floated from Sumter, where it had first been humiliated. With Gov. Curtin we may hope that the war with "its lessons and its logic will now make us a nation of freemen indeed; a homogeneous people, with all bitterness and angry feeling forgotten, since the great and discordant element which caused it has been obliterated forever."

and angry feeling forgotten, since the great and discordant element which caused it has been obliterated forever."

Our contest was not unmindful of letters; for, though the arts and literature are depressed by, and shrink from, blood in the beginning, it stimulates them in the end. When Dante sang, old Italy was rent by the civil fends of Guelph and Ghibelline. Alfieri was born of war. On the verge of the tremendous conflict in France stood those glants Ronsseau and Voltaire. Cervantes pouned his seplential romance ere Spain was free from the Infidel, and the Evangelists of Christ wrote their Epistles by the dight of their fires of martyrdom.

Our battle-fields lacked neither bards nor historians. Each episede of heroism, or true courage, or self-sacrifice, was trained into some green wreath that shall hang in the future as in the past—cool and immortal—until history has grown dim like tradition, and men search in vain for the sites of battle-fields.

Our school system progressed with, rather than suffered by, the war; in proof of which we have but to notice the increased appropriations, the larger number of teachers and pupils, and the beautiful structures everywhere erected for educational advancement.

Neither was the war without its imprint upon those who remained to represent our graduating class. Its sangulmary lessons upon the field and in the hospital; its broad hand of destruction and its attendays of orphanage, widowhood and sorrow brought with them that individual reflection which otherwise might have been longer delayed. Of nimeteen graduates half occupy commanding positions in mercantilo life. Of the remainder, two are represented in the ministry, two in medicine and one in law; the latter, at present, being Deputy Attorney-General of the State of Pennsylvania. One is the Librarian of the Cincinnati Library; one in Professor in the Lehigh University, and one the editor of a western agricultural paper.

The youngest member of our class, Henry T. Butler, died ere yet the flush of his commencement ha brighter or the times more pregnant with important events.

Across the water Spain is preparing the way for a return to her former glory by custing from het a rule lost allke to honor, to nationality and to self. The Germans are at work like bees, modelling and constructing a mighty kingdom, destined to become as great as it is enlightened. Reforms like the "disestablishment bill" sweep through England. The cry of "live the Republic" is becoming general throughout over-ruled France. The Orient is awakening from its lethargy, and brave discoverers throw light from the innermost jungles of torpid and tropical Africa. Cuba, having borne oppression like a brave man's pain, is now engaged in a struggle which deminds our sympathy and ald.

Unhappy Mexico is being reconstructed and revivified; and while half of the great South American continent is torn by internal dissension, the remainder is being peopled, developed and enlightened. So stands the Unhappy Mexico is being reconstructed and revivified; and while half of the "creat South American continent is torn by internal dissension, the remainder is being peopled, developed and enlightened. So stands the world's great kaleidoscope to-day. The successful termination of our war, the laying of the Atlantic cables, and the completion of the Pacific Railroad, are the advance nille-stones in the great highway of universal enlightenment.

On both sides of the Continent we have drawn up our shood-gates, and say to every nationality: Flow in upon us! But the invitation is attendant with its responsibilities, only to be met by a people of sound and healthful knowledge. There are lauds in the West which fairly laugh with the fatness they conceal. Crowned with fruits and grasses and grains, sparkling with springs and interlarded-with-valuable-orea-they-but await the key of knowledge to unlock their treasures.

As inmigration makes these wilds bud and blossom into States and Territories, laws and representation will have to be forthcoming; canals, railroads, schools and churches constructed; geological and civil surveys made, and all the wants attendant upon an enlarged and an increasing civilization met and provided for. To-day we find this country busy with solving grave questions of the times are calling for new inventions on a par with the reaper, the sewing-machine and the type-setter. The boys who go forth to-day will have to be of the men to selve these questions and hoest these demands. It is for them to remember that the TRULY GREAT are those who from the study's quiet or the workshop's din evolve those principles of government and invention which best meet the wants of their fellow-men.

None can now afford to be file. Time marches too quickly. It almost seems as though mature, which has been teaching us so long, new denamals son 'lessons in return. To do nothing is to be unhappy, unhealthy, criminal. The man

And what its worth, ask death-heds; they can tell.
Part with it as with life, refuetant; big
With holy hope of noble time to come."

And what its worth, ask death-hols; they can tell. Part with it as with life reductant; big.

With holy hope of noble time to come.

It is connently fitting that the graduates of this school shall take rank with the Alumni of any institution of learning in this or other lands.

This city is a monument of lore. Penn opened the stretched containing in this or other lands.

This city is a monument of lore. Penn opened the stretched containing the stretched their works and their teachings the lands as the growth of the containing the stretched their works and their teachings the lands, they are known and honored over all the world. We have flourishing libraries, one ante-dating the revolution. Historias descendants of fllustrious men are scattered thick among us. The teachings of Christianity are sounded in our doors from a hundred churches, and the very Temple of Liberty rears its heli-capped head in our midst. It would be pleasant to linger longer upon this stage.

After five years buffetting with life and death, it is like fool what to a man athirst to return and once more drink of the fount from whence he started on his journey. We now look back upon our school-hoy life as a season of perpetual holiday, frangth with kind converse, with health and happiness. But there are others to succeed me in this day's exercises, who are impatient to launch thems-lyes into action. Allow me then to welcome to lear kindly faces those whom the Faculty and the Board of Control have this day seen fit to honor with the degree of fachelor of Arts. May they remember that building pon present knowledge; making truth the aim of lought, and good the end of action; working with unring energy, and fearing neither harships nor reverses, till bring a success as gratifying as it is lasting.

Each having chosen his active pursuit, may he have necourage to cling to it. Scholarly attanments, corrected operiment, and sufficient energy, will-in, the end, with the montre having thouse his it is not the degree. The man who seeks one thing in life,

Franklin West,
Langdon C. Stewardson, 86.6

Prof. Riché then addressed the graduates as follows:
Young Centlemen: At this important crisis in your lives I cannot part from you without a few words of admonition and advice. You have been the recipients of the higher education, which it is the custom of some among us to decry, but which it is right that you should understand and properly estimate. It has placed you in a position whence you can take a wider survey of the life before you and more intelligently measure the opportunity which it presents and the obligations which it imposes. You go out to the struggle, to which we all are destined, better armed and prepared than the majority of your fellows. The city that has educated you looks to you for a return proportioned to the expense and care which she has been at in your behalf, and I have an assured hope that you will fully meet all the demands that she can justly make upon you.

But renember, what you have often been taught in the course of youngfour years of study, that that return is not looked for in the external positions that you may attain, or in any meretricious lustre with which you may adorn your numes—but in the amount of honest, carnest work that you may be able to accomplish. Your education coulds you fairly to appreciate your own capucities, and to choose your sphere of labor with proportions fairly to appreciate your own capucities, and to choose your sphere of labor with the will you be successful, or the reverse. You are not to value yourselves or your performance by the deceitful measures which the conventionalities of the world have set up. No matter how humble the station to which circumstances may confine you, the hand of God will be with you and over you, and will guide you through the obscurest paths to His predestined that the higher education is the fitting preparation for all work, that if gives a truer skill for every craft as well as a higher intelligence for every profession. The wealth of this city is based upon labor. The educat

THE MUSICAL FESTIVAL of the German Societies of the Middle States, which is to take place in Baltimore next week, is exciting much attention among the Philadelphia Societies, all of which have been rehearsing for the performances. Last evening the Young Männerchor had a final rehearsal at their hall in Cherry street, which was attended by a number of their friends. Under the admirable lead of Mr. Hartmann, they sang a charming chorus called "Hope." This was followed by called the Midnight Walk, the leading tenor part sung by Herr Graf. It is in this trial piece, which has been vainly essayed by several New York Societies, that the Young Männerchor intend to present their claims for the first prize at Baltimore. It is hard to imagine any composition more difficult to sing well; but the rehearsal last evening showed that it has been thoroughlast evening showed that it has been thoroughly mastered. The Young Männerchor also sang the fine old song, "In Einen Kühlen Grunde;" "Rohtraut," the prize song of the New York Arion Society, and another beautiful chorus, called "The Hunter." All of these pieces gave great delight to the company present. Among these was Herr W. Tschirch, the celebrated organist from Gera, in Saxony, who complimented the Society in a handsome who complimented the Society in a handsome manner for their fine singing. He was pre-sented with a badge of the Young Mannechor, by their President, Professor J. Hoffmann. Mrs. Philip Trau also presented him with a TELEGRAPH FIRE ALARM.—The introduction of the fire-alarm telegraph, by which the fire companies in all sections of the city can receive alarms and the locality of fires as "quick as meditation on the wings of thought," renders it useless to ring the old stationary alarm bells. Ex-Mayor Henry, several years since, stopped the ringing of the State House bell in time of fires, excepting those which might occur in the night time. With proper regulations, all these large bells might remain silent in time of fire, the same as in several Southern and Western cities, where fires are extinguished quickly, without unnecessary alarm, and by a less number of firemen man in Philadelphia.

PRESENTATIONS .- An interesting ceremony took place fast evening at the M. E. Church, corner of Twentieth and Jefferson streets. A beautiful silk flag, with guidon to match, was presented by the ladies of the church to Company B. Gray Reserves, Captain Cadwallader. The presentation took place in the audience-chamber of the church, the soldiers being drawn up to a front face by their captain, while their band enlivened the scene by playing several national airs.

The flag was presented on behalf of the la-dies by Col. Win. H. Maurice, and received on behalf of the "Grays" by ex-Gov. Pollock. After the flag ceremonies were over, a large and beautiful silver pitcher, with two silver goblets, were presented by the congregation to their pastor, Rev. Mr. Burrill.

GOING TO EUROPE.—Mr. M. Richards Muckle, who has been for many years con-nected with the Public Ledger establishment as Cashier, is about to take a respite from his arduous duties and visit. Europe for a short time. He will sail on the 21st of July. His numerous friends will all wish him a pleasant trip and a safe return to his home.

FIRE-PROOF SAFES.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB HERRING'S PATENT FRANKLINITE BANKER'S CHEST.

> THE REAL TEST! BURGLARS FOILED!

PERBYVILLE STATION, PENNA. R. R., & June 12, 1869.

MESSRS. FARREL, HERRING & CO., No. 629 CHESTNUT Street, Philadelphia GENTS-A persistent but unsuccessful effort was made on the night of May 29, 1869, to drill the Bankers' Chest received from you a few months ago.

From facts that have come to our knowledge, it is evident that the attempt to open it was renewed on Sunday evening following. Finding all efforts to drill it use less, the effort was then made to break the lock. The hammering was heard by parties in the neighborhood for several hours, but supposing it to arise from the railroad men replacing a defective rail, excited no alarm. The tools, with the exception of the drills, were left. It is evident that they were not only prepared, but perfectly familiar with the construction of your Chest. That they falled is another evidence that your Bankers' Chests are what you claim for them-Burglar Respectfully yours.

J. BALSBACK, Agent.

SAFES! CHAMPION

GREAT FIRE AT CAMDEN. CAMDEN, June 7, 1859.

MESSRS, FARREL, HERRING & CO., No. 629 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA DEAR SIRS: At the very destructive fire of Messrs. McKeen & Bingham's Saw Mill, which occurred on the evening of the 6th instant in this place-The Safe manufactured by you, belonging to the late firm of F. M. Bingham & Garrison, was in the building and subjected to a very severe test, as the fire raged flercely for several hours; and so great was the heat that the brass plates were melted off, and to our great surprise, when the Safe was opened, we found all the books

und papers uninjured. Yours, respectfully, SAML. B. GARRISON,

Late of F. M. Bingham & Garrison. HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES, "THE MOST RELIABLE SECURITY FROM FIRE NOW KNOWN." Manufactured and sold by FARREL, HERRING & CO., 629 CHESTNUT Street.
