THE PRESCH CABLE.

The World gives the following account of the termini of the French Atlantic Cable:
Great events are often useful in teaching geography and a little bistory. It is so with this expedition. Not a few have never heard of the islands of St. Pierre and Missuelea and of the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, and still fewer know where this archipelago is situated, what its history is, and what are its stuated, what its Instary is, and what are its advantages. If any of our readers take up a chart of the coast of Newfoundland they will find on the south three islands known as Great Miquelon, Little Miquelou, or Langly, and St. Pierre. These are barren rocks, valuable only as a refuge for French fishermen, and as giving France a title to the surrounding fisheries, which are extremely important. The entire area of St. Pierre and French Miquelon is about 106 square miles, and the permanent population perhaps 2,000 French Miquelon is about 106 square miles, and the permanent population perhaps 2,000 souls. Their exports, annually, are about 8,000,000 francs; according to official estimation, but the actual value is a local deally tion; but the actual value is at least double that. The articles imported are whale oil, cod-fish oil and codfish. The imports were, in 1859, about 8,000,000 actual value. In 1863, the imports were of the value of 3,880,103 francs, or £155,204; for that year the exports were 5,326,014 francs, or £213,040. In 1864 the imports were 3,632,784 francs, or £145,311; the imports were 7,638,320, or £305,533. These be-imports were 7,638,321, or £30,535. These being official figures may be regarded as under rather than above the actual value.

The position of Great Miquelon, the most northerly of the group, is in latitude 47 degrees 4 minutes north, and in longitude 56 degrees and 20 minutes west of Greenwich. Then, imposition for the part Little Miguelon. and 20 immediately south of this, are Little Miquelon and its consort, St. Pierre. The history of these islands—St. Pierre and French Miquelon—is remarkable. They are all that remains of the vast possessions which France once owned in Northern America. Even when at the peace of Utrecht, Newfoundland was yielded to Queen Anne, these isles were retained, as at the peace of Paris in 1763, they were confirmed to France. THE AMERICAN TERMINUS.

The American terminus will be at Rouse's Hummock, in the town of Duxbury, Mass. This is situated near the Gurnet light, at the This is situated near the Gurnet light, at the entrance of Plymouth Harbor. It is not quite two miles from the village, but to reach it requires a jaunt of six miles round the beach. The hummock is a conical-shaped hill of about thirty or forty acres in area. The Legislature of Massachusetts have granted a charter to an "Ocean Telegraph Company," who will carry a line out beyond the jurisdiction of the United States, and then make a splice with the French cable; thus, any trouble which might have been caused by Hoar's absurd letter will be avoided. The main office will be in the old Bank building at Duxbury. An independent land line will extend from this to Boston. Formerly, Duxbury was one of the first ship-Formerly, Duxbury was one of the first ship building towns in Massachusetts. In 1837 a building towns in Massachusetts. In 1837 a severe blow was received during the panic, and six years subsequently, the large clipper trade having commenced, and suitable timber not being found in Duxbury, the builders removed to Boston and Medford. The office in Duxbury will be in charge of M. J. Gaines, formerly United States Consul-General at Trivell but since employed in the telegraph Tripoli, but since employed in the telegraph service of the Mediterranean. He will be alded by a body of twelve electricians.

ALMOST A TRAGEDY.

A Tug Strikes a Rock in the Niagara River, and Takes Fire—Narrow Escape of a Party of Excursionists.

[Frem the Buffalo Courier, July 7.]
Monday morning the tug Mildred steamed down Niagara River to White's Island with a party of ladies and gentlemen, some twenty-five or thirty in number, who thought that es-caping from the confusion incident to the celebration here was the surest way to a brief season of pleasure. The day was spent pleas-antly on the island. It was quite advanced in the afternoon when they started to return, but nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the excursionists till about 5 o'clock, when reaching a point on the American side, a short distance above the International dock, the tug ran upon a rock with great violence. The shock was so rude that every one of the passengers was precipitated upon the deck, and the boat carcened so that a torrent of water poured over the starboard side. The ladies and gentlemen had scarcely recovered their positions before it was discovered that the boat was on fire, in the engine-room. The scene was an exciting one for a minute or two, but the ladies soon became self-possessed, and the gentlemen set to work to ascertain their duty no the premises. The fire had got to work in good carnest, but by the energetic use of two pails, the only weapons of defence on board, the flames were kept from wrapping the deck in their embrace. The tug was worked off the rock in a very short time, and the captain, seeing there was danger of the utter destruction of the boat, determined to run her round the migrant to the American shore. This was the of the boat, determined to run her round the pier on to the American shore. This was objected to by the gentlemen, and Mr. Hiram Smith taking the wheel in his hands, and knowing that there was seventy pounds o steam left to work with, ran the boat across the river, till he brought her up alongside the International dock. The passengers were removed from the tug as soon as possible, and the crew of the International ferry-boat came promptly to the assistance of the consuming tug. In about fifteen minutes the flames were completely subdued and the boat saved from total destruction, albeit her interior, in the vicinity of her tion, albeit her interior, in the vicinity of her boiler, must be badly charred. The escape from a terrible catastrophe was certainly a narrow one, and all on board the boat have reason to be thankful for their timely release from the peril which threatened them.

The excursionists were conveyed to this city by the Grand Trunk Railway, free of charge, and most of them, we opine, will remember the accident attending their observance of the Fourth of '69.

NOVA SCOTIA.

The Question of Annexation---Interesting Letter.

The Tribune publishes the following letter from a prominent and influential citizen of Nova Scotia:

THE QUESTIONS OF INDEPENDENCE AND AN-NEXATION.

I have followed with much sympathy and I have followed with much sympathy and interest, your efforts to arouse the people of the Dominion upon the question of Independence. All classes of intelligent public men acknowledge it to be inevitable. Those who are well informed say that the motive which urged the late Conservative Administration in England to shut its ears to the earnest protest of Nova Scotia against the Union, was the strong conviction of the need of subordinating all other questions to the great necessity of reconviction of the need of subordinating all other questions to the great necessity of relieving Old England from the probable consequences of a continuance of her colonial relations in British North America. With this in quences of a continuance of her colonial rela-tions in British North America. With this in view, the present and late Administration, each responsive to a public opinion it could not ignore, have been quick to initiate and de-velop such public works and interests as our prospective independence makes essential; hence, whether we desire it or not, it seems ence, whether we desire it or not, it seems that we must soon accept the responsibilities of an independent nation. Thus far, I think, no well-informed Canadian will honestly join issue with me. Next comes the question, What shall we do? and upon this men divide. We have a small but active body of men familiar with the instand outs of Canadian politics, who believe in the possibility of reproducing here a government of King, Lords and Commons. They know this can only be done by first-camenting the parts of which the Dominion is composed; next by lulling the public mind, so that the next by lulling the public mind, so that the change may be effected when their plans have ripened under a hue and cry of loyalty and ripened under a line and cry of loyalty and enthusiasm for some scions of the Itoyal family. Their theory is that of the established usage at home, viz., that Parliament can do anything. To consult the people they regard as a new-fangled Americanism, and essentially anti-British. Thus, if they are permitted to succeed, we shall wake up some fine morning with a full-fledged hereditary aristocracy and its attendant blessings. On the other hand, there are those who believe that the positivities of a country should be such as naturally grow out of the social and industrial life of the people. They can find nothing, but incongruity and absurdity in the stroduction here of a relic of European feulism. It may be well for Hayti and her imi-

we blacks, but not the thing for white men in the nineteenth century. They want in our government an assurance of security for life in the mineteenth century. They want in our government an assurance of security for life and property. This they would obtain as simply and cheaply as possible. They believe in consulting an intelligent people, particularly as they do not recognize in the Carters and McDonalds of the day men whose high intelligence and particular public spirit are likely to lead them in a direction superior to that which those interested would choose for themselves. Annexation, with its war debt, they do not nexation, with its war debt, they do not want, but independence we must have whether we will or not. Hence, let it come, not as a surprise, with the extravegant para-phernalia of the Old World monarchy, but as an inheritance for which we are prepared, to be scriously accepted and prudently administered.

ADELINA PATTI.

Her Reported Domestic Difficulties—False Stories.

A London letter-writer says:
Everybody knows, who knows anything, that rumor's tongue, at no time very reliable, is never so imaginative as when dealing with persons who follow the stage as a profession.
Of course so charming and popular an artist as Adelina Patti could not be expected to escape without a full share of the attention of scandal mongers and other wise fattlers, scandal mongers and other wise tattlers, and all sorts of report have been put afloat concerning the domestic life of this gifted and favoruse lady. The burden of them all is the terrible misfortune of her marriage with the Marquis de Caux, who has been described as a very ogre—a desperate gambler and ruffian, who has seized upon his wife's earnings as soon as they have been realized, and who has even stripped her of the splendid gifts Emperors have laid at her feet, for the purpose of gratifying his insatiate passion for play. According to one story poor little Patti has been compelled to submit, heartbroken, to the brutality of de Caux, under penalty of a severe beating at night after she has finished her sweet warblings at the opera or concert. According to another, she has been firm enough to resist the demands of her tyrant, and has actually "comanother, she has been firm enough to resist the demands of her tyrant, and has actually "commenced a suit, you know," in the French courts for the separate control of her property. All this time "poor little Patti" has been looking as plump as a partridge and as happy as a lark, and has been singing as sweetly as a dozen nightingales concentrated into one. Now, the truth of the matter is, that the Marning de Cruy is a prefect gentlemen devotedly. Now, the truth of the matter is, that the Marquis de Caux is a perfect gentleman, devotedly attached to his wife, and that the couple, to carry out the feathery simile, live together like two turtle doves. The Marquis has been a devotee of the turf in years gone by, and, like many other young men at the French Court, has spent a great deal of money. One of his estates on the Seine is unequaled in beauty by any place of a similar description in France, but it passed temporarily out of his hands through peculiar embarrassments long before his marriage, and Patti has set her heart upon recovering and possessing it, no doubt calculating on spending the greater portion of her days there after her retirement from the stage. The Marquis, so far from gambling, lives as quietly and economically as possible, and aids her in every way in the accomplishment of the object of her heart. complishment of the object of her heart.

CITY BULLETIN.

FALSE PROPHETS .- Saturday, the 10th inst. was set apart by some fanatics for the destruction of the world, but like many other predictions, time has proven it to be false. The modern disciples of Ahab every now and then venture a prophecy of the dissolution of the great globe itself, with its cloud-capped towers and government. and gorgeous palaces, but in fixing the precise period is where they never fail to make a mis-take. Fortunately for society, the great mass of people have more learning now than their predecessors had; therefore they are more intelligent, and not so likely to be imposed upon by superstition. In this respect the citizens of Philadelphia have greatly improved, as will of Philadelphia have greatly improved, as will be seen by comparing them with those of forty years ago. At about that period one of the nightly watch of the old city proper astounded the citizens by reporting that during the night, while he was perambulating his accustomed route along Third street, he saw a headless being that looked something like a man appear on the sidewalk in front of St. Peter's graveyard. The headless figure proceeded to the corner of Third and Union streets, where it vanished into the air. About the same time a voice was heard, saving that the same time a voice was heard, saying that on the 17th of March following the world was to be destroyed. Local news reporters, in those days, were not known, and the watchman, in order to warn the people, published a narrative on small slips of paper, which readily sold at the rate of two cents a piece. There was great apprehension among many of the people, and the forthcoming 17th of March, St. Patrick's day, was looked forward to with dreadful forebodings of terror. The day finally arrived, and at about three o'clock in the afternoon immense numbers of crows flew wildly in the wild above towards. wildly in the void above, towards Jersey. The darkest kind of clouds enthralled the sky, a hurricane ensued, and rain and snow fell thick and fast. Among the more ignorant of the people the greatest terror prevailed, and quite a number of deaths resulted from the fright. The storm, which lasted all the night and part of the next day, was exceedingly violent; but finally the clouds broke, and the sun smiled gain upon the world and the "rest of man-

Twice since that period the Millerites have fixed the time for the dissolution of all earthly things, and on one of these occasions ascension robes were prepared, and the disciples of Miller enrobed themselves for the especial elevation. An enthusiastic Millerite, residing on Third street, near German, put his robe on, and, ascending to the roof of his house, awaited the first blast of the resurrection horn. Upon the other occasion several hundred Millerites assembled in the old Chinese Museum building, that occupied a site now covered by the southern part of the Conti-nental, and there they awaited the dissolving tableau. A wag having procured a tin horn, gave a few blasts upon it, and the scene which ensued we will not attempt to describe. Had paudemomium itself burst open suddenly it would not have presented a more frightful spectacle.

The last attempt at sensation, that set apart for the 10th inst., having proved entirely false, it is hoped that the fools and fanatics will simmer down into eternal obscurity.

SABBATH BREAKING .- Every Sunday when there is a brisk wind the river Delaware be-comes studded with the sails of hundreds of pleasure boats that dash ahead before, or on the wind, thus presenting a marine panorama on an enlarged scale, and by no means unin-teresting. At such times, and particularly yesterday, thousands of Sabbath-breakers were in boats of almost every kind, from the large and neatly trimmed yacht down to the smallest gunning-skiff or batteau. Towards evening the steamers became over-Towards evening the steamers became over-crowded, and the return trip, at such times, is so inconvenient and annoying as to be a severe tax upon all the pleasure experienced during the day. One might suppose, without much stretch of the imagination, that some high car-nival was in progress on the river yesterday. In a word, it was a scene of Sabbath-breaking by wholesele WHISKY SEIZED .- Assistant Assessor Edwin A. Howell, of the Fourth District; observed a suspicious looking wagon being driven along Broad street on Friday afternoon last. He followed the wagon to Marseilles street, which runs from Fifteenth street, above Spring Garden. There several barrels were taken from the wagon and were removed to a house. A couple of policemen were then stationed at the house while Mr. Howell notified Assessor the house while Mr. Howell notified Assessor Barrett of the discovery. A detective was detailed to look after the matter. The house where the barrels had been taken was searched, but no barrels could be found. The officers then looked over the fence, and in the next yard were seen the barrels, which were found to be full of whisky, and were confiscated, as the necessary tax had not been paid.

DISASTER IN THE OIL REGIONS.

Henry Floods...A Fire.
[From the Titusville Herald, July 10.]
One of the most disastrous floods with which the oil district has been visited since the great flood of the Spring of 1865, occurred night before last. During Thursday afternoon dense, black clouds gathered over the district and black clouds gathered over the district, and black clouds gathered over the district, and toward evening a rain-storm of unusual violence set in. It was accompanied with frequent and vivid flashes of lightning, which, so far as reported, took effect with disastrous effects only on Upper Cherry run. The rain, however, fell in torrents through the night, and the small'streams within a radius of thirty rules of this place were swellen to an universe. miles of this place were swollen to an unpre cedented height.

The destruction of small bridges, culverts, &c., was general. The bridges over Pithole Creek from Pleasantville to its mouth were Creek from Pleasantville to its mouth were swept away, together with two or three oil tanks and other property. Nearly all the bridges over the streams emptying in Oil and East Oil creeks to the northward and eastward of this city, were carried off. Along the track of the O. C. and A. R. Railway from Irvington to Titusville, there were a great number of slides, some of which were yery large. Several culverts and portions of the track were also washed away, and trains the track were also washed away, and trains ran only between Titusville and Corry. Up to last evening the track had been cleared between Oil City and Petroleum Centre. The road will be open to-day. The Titusville Pipe Company's lines were broken in several places, Company's lines were broken in several places, and the Oleopolis pipe was not in working order last evening. Altogether, a large amount of property was destroyed and a great deal of damage done.

The oil fire on the Tallman farm and the Pittsburgh and Cherry Run, occurred substantially as reported by telegraph. Three of the wells on the Tallman farm, from which the rigs were burned, were started up yesterday afternoon. On the tract above mentioned, the work of erecting new rigs in place of those work of erecting new rigs in place of those destroyed was commenced yesterday.
