LOTEUS ORPHAN EXAMINATIONS—Col. George F. McFarland, State Superintendent of Soldiers' Orphans, made his annual visita tion and examination of the Lincoln Institution dottand examination of the Lincoln Institution yesferday. Colonel McFarland was assisted in his examinations by Mrs. E. W. Hutter, Lady Superintendent; Professor Jesse Kennedy, Principal of the Mount Joy Soldiers' Orphan School; Professer Chas. Deans, Principal of the Chester Springs Soldiers' Orphan School, and Mr. Francis Wells. The examination, which was very thorough, occupied the entire day, and was very satisfactory in all its results. The following were the averages of the several classes: Third Grade—Orthography, 96; reading, 83; writing, 96.

averages of the several classes: Third Grade—Orthography, 96; reading, 83; writing, 96.
Second Grade—Orthography, 88; reading, 75; writing, 90. First Grade—Orthography, 71; reading, 85; writing, 93.

A marked progress has been made by the pupils of the institution during the past year. The Examining Board expressed much gratification with the enlarged accommodations and the excellent appointments of the building, which are, in some respects, superior to those of any of the orphan schools under the charge of the State, perhaps excepting the Northern Home, which ranks with the Lincoln Institution in the admirable character of its arrangements.

com Institution in the admirable character of its arrangements.

The Examining Board was especially pleased with the fine physical condition of the pupils of the Institution. Few better examples can be given of the advantages of a systematic attention to good diet, perfect cleanliness, proper exercises and thorough ventilation, than is presented by the hearty, bright, wholesome appearance of the pupils of the Lincoln Institution. Many of them have not been more than two—and none of them more than about three—years under the care of this institution, and yery many of them were in a very bad and very many of them were in a very bad physical condition when admitted. All traces of this have disappeared; and the boys, as a class, will average 100 on any physical examination.

The exercises yesterday were relieved by brief recitations, singing and a parade and drill, in all of which the boys acquitted them-

Colonel McFarland has done an excellent thing in establishing these annual examina-tions of the Soldiers' Orphan Schools. A great stimulus is given to pupils, teachers and managers, and the competition created be-tween the various schools has a very beneficial and healthy effect. A uniform system of textand healthy effect. A uniform system of text-books and course of studies is now being per-fected by the Superintendent for all the schools under his charge, and the next annual examination will give much more accurate in-dications of their relative progress than the one now being held.

The Examining Board left, last night, to continue its visitations in the interior, holding its next examination, to-day, at the Chester

THE GUNNER'S RUN DROWNING CASE.—
The investigation of the circumstances attending the drowning of John Graff, in Gunner's Run, on Saturday night last, was resumed this morning by Coroner Daniels.

William Rodish, sworn—I went to the greenhouse yesterday, and am positive that the deceased is the man who boarded with me ten weeks; he has been drinking very much of late; he worked steady for four days, last week; he made eight dollars, gave me four dollars and a half for board; 1 saw him on Saturday night at 8 o'clock; he asked me to take a glass of beer; he said it would be the last glass I would take with him; he offered me his night-key, but I refused it; at eleven o'clock he told a friend of his, who worked in my cellar, to take the key and give it to me, as he did not want to take it in the water with him; he has told me the last four or five weeks that he intended to kill himself; when working on his bench he would throw his work ing on his bench he would throw his work from him and exclaim, "here they come now;" and while in bed would jump out on the floor and act as though he was out of his mind, and tell us he had a "devil in him;" he drank very heavy all the time.

Ferdinand Troendle sworn—I went out and Ferdinand Troendle sworn—I went out and looked at the body yesterday; am positive it was that of John Graff, who boarded at Mr. Rodish's; I've known him about ten weeks; he drank yery much; I slept with him five or six weeks, and heard him say he would kill himself if he got drunk again; I saw him last at the dinner table on Saturday, the 10th inst.

The jury, after a long deliberation, agreed upon the following verdict:

ANOTHER HOMICIDE.—Charles O'Reilly, who was stabbed on Twenty-third street, near Vine, on Monday night last, died of his injuries, this morning, at the Pennsylvania Hospital. Win. Moore, who is alleged to have inflicted the fatal stabs, delivered himself into custody at the Detective office this morning. A man named Charles McMinn was arrested, last night, at Twenty-third and Vine streets, by the Sixth District Police, upon the charge of having been concerned in the affair. After O'Reilly was stabbed, McMinn, it is alleged, knocked him down and kicked him. He was sent to the Central Station, and locked up. Two women, who are also said to have been in the fight, are likewise in custody. The quarrel, which has resulted in the killing of a man, is supposed to have originated from religious differences. O'Reilly is said to have been a Catholic, while Moore is a Protestant. ANOTHER HOMICIDE.-Charles O'Reilly,

THE LAST BALLOON FAILURE.

The California Air Vessel. · [From the San Francisco Alta, July 5.] A number of our citizens, on Saturday, re-ceived invitations from the Secretary of the Aerial Steam Navigation Company to attend a private view of their model carriage, which has for a long time past been in the course of construction at Shell Mound Track, in San Notes County Western 1994 Mateo County. We found the "Avitor" inflated and the engineer and attendants leading the stately little fellow from the shed where he was constructed out into the open air. Unfortunately a stiff breeze had just sprung up, and it was too evident the managers had their own doubts as to whether he should be allowed to soar aloft. Under such an adverse circumstance nothing was left but to return him to the shed, where he was put through a measured pace. We are compelled to say that the performance looked something a feeling of regret, rather than of ridicule, pervaded the company present at the lowering of the hopes that had been raised by its over-of the hopes that had been raised by its over-sanguine inventor.

The Avitor can be briefly described simply as a balloon of the form of a very short and thick cigar, its extreme length being about ninety-five feet, its height ten feet, and its width at the centre about seven feet. A deli-cate frame-work of light and strong wood passes longitudinally around it, and serves to hold the guides for regulating its movement in their places. At the after end of the frame the rudder is placed—an ingenious contrivance for directing its course either vertically or horizontally. The propelling power is furnished by a very small engine and boiler, of the very lightest weight, and certainly of no of the very lightest weight, and certainly of more effective ferce than could be produced by turning a crank by a man of ordinary strength. The engine and boiler—the latter fired up with alcohol—are in dangerous proximity to the balloon itself, and are placed in a niche in its bottom. From the engine, by light deafte and conving the power is transhight shafts and gearing, the power is transmitted to a couple of propellers working in the frame first mentioned, and a number of lines, bands, ribbons and network, all of the lightest material, serve to bind the frame to the balloon and preserve its contour. The inventor has evidently made his greatest error in supposing that any practical speed can be obtained from the application of so little power to so great a mass. It is apparent that to give any velocity to the balloon—relative to the air through which it travels—the air in front must be removed and passed to its rear, so that a bulk of its own size must be removed by its propellers in order to force it to move its own length. The scale upon which the machinery is constructed as so very truther the machinery is constructed is so very trining and inadequate to do this, that its failure caunot be a matter of surprise—in fact, until some other power is discovered that can be con-densed in a far less compass than that of steam, we fear that the success of the present affair is hopeless.
