Mr. Boutwell's Ultimatum to the Holders of U. S. 5-20 Bonds. I will sell gold at the highest market price for currency, and buy bonds (Five-twenties) at the lowest currency rates, just as long as gold is worth more than currency. When gold will not sell for more than currency in the market, then currency will be as good as gold no better or worse. I have then found the specie basis. If gold appreciates in the market, I will get the more currency for it, and can thus pay more for the bonds, the one in advance measuring the other; if gold depreciates, it Lyings the currency the nearer to the par of specie, which is just what I desire and aim at. Examine my Financial Barometer.

5-20 bond, in coin. What say you?

A word more with you.

To the holders of United States 5-20 bonds:
I have just told you what Mr. Boutwell did not say he was doing or would do; I will change the reasoning slightly, and place before you, in a rather more simple phraseology, my conclusions or inferences from the dogmatical axioms above laid down. At the same time I respectfully solicit, discussion, or even time I respectfully solicit discussion, or even refutation, of the principles assumed by those who may have the intellect to do it and give the proofs. I assert first, as a leading principle, that all commercial business must of necessity gravitate towards the standard of commercial value (that is, gold,) throughout the world. The odds are largely in favor of this result against all others. This is to the commercial world what gravity is to the physical world. Each is the great flywhold will be the great flywhold w wheel and balance in their respective spheres wheel and balance in their respective spheres.

He specific spheres, then Mr. Boutwell will get more currency for it, and he can give more of it for the 5-20 bonds. If gold falls, then currency is just so much nearer the value of gold, and the lower gold falls, the nearer we approximate to the specie value: the very end and aim of Mr. Boutwell. If bonds appreciate so much that everybody holds on for a higher price, we are just so much the nearer specie payments. If just so much the nearer specie payments. It no one will sell 5-20 bonds for currency at a margin of profit to the Treasury, Mr. Bout-well can call in the 5-20's which have run more than five years, and pay them in coin; or if the bondholders are very anxious for it, the Secretary of the Treasury might ask Congress to authorize him to exchange them for a thirty year bond at five per cent.. or a forty year bond at four per cent, which you will be very glad to accept rather than lose so splendid an investment. Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. John F. Stump, No. 609 North Twenty-second street.

THE COURTS.

QUARTER SESSIONS.—Judge Peirce.—Yester-day afternoon, Emma J. Hawkins was put on trial, charged with poisoning the family of Mr. Hoff, at No. 404 North Eleventh street. The case occupied the attention of the court yesterday afternoon and all of this morning's resident and was not concluded when well well. session, and was not concluded when our report closed. The prisoner was but 16 years old, rather stout, and good looking, and her sprightly conduct while in court indicated that she did not fully realize the position she was in. Seven bills of indictment were preferred against her, charging her with assault and battery, with intent to kill John M. Hoff, his wife, three or four children, and a lady boarding in his family; and the testimony offered by the Commonwealth was to the following effect: The prisoner was apprenticed as a servant to Mrs. Hoff about two and a half years ago, and up to this occurrence had lived with her apparently well satisfied with the treatment she received. On several occasions, however, her conduct in the street displeased her mistress, and consequently such punishment as continement within doors for a month was threatened against her. On the 21st of June she was sent to buy yeast, and upon performing this errand to buy yeast, and upon performing this errand she sifted a quantity of flour, and with the yeast purchased and the flour sifted by her, bread was made and eaten by the family and the lady there boarding. On the night of the same day some became violently ill, and others were so the next morning, the symptoms being a nausea at the stomach, voniting, itching and pain in the eyes. A physician was summoned, and suspecting that poison had been taken, he administered antidotes, and asked if the girl was suspected. This aroused the fears of Mrs. Hoff, and when she aroused the fears of Mrs/Hoff, and when she recovered she asked the prisoner if anything had been put into the bread to make them sick; she put her arms around the lady's waist and answered that she had put arsenic into it, and was very sorry she had done so. When first asked why she had done such a thing, she said she did not know, but subsequently said it was begans this punishment. quently said it was because this punishment had been threatened against her.
An examination of the bread was made, but the person who made it was not in court, and the only direct evidence that poison was in the bread was the acknowledgment of the prisoner. The defence offered no testimony, but J. T.

The detence onered no testimony, our o. 1.
Pratt, Esq., representing the prisoner, argued that this lack of proof of the actual presence of poison in the bread was fatal to the Commonwealth's case; and also that the conduct of the girl herself rebutted the presumption of a felonious intent, in the absence of all direct proof of it rect proof of it.

—It seems to us that the following, from a Western court room, is worthy of the defunct but never forgotten Wouter Van Ewillen: Western court room, is worthy of the defanct but never forgotten Wouter Van Ewillen: If the jury believe from the evidence, that the plaintiff and defendant were partners in the grocery, and that the plaintiff bought out the defendant and that the defendant paid the note by delivering to the plaintiff a cow, which he warranted not breachy, and the warranty was broken by reason of the breachiness of the cow, and he drove the cow back and tendered her to the defendant but he refused to receive her, and the plaintiff took her home again and put a heavy yoke on her to prevent her from jumping fences, and by reason of her yoke she broke her neck and died; and if the jury believe that the defendant's interest in the grocery was worth anything, the plaintiff's note was worthless and the cow good for nothing, either for beef or milk, then the jury must find out for themselves how they will decide the case; for the Court—if she understands herself, and she thinks she does—don't know how such a dease should be decided."

The vivid flashes of crimson, green or blue The vivid flashes of crimson, green or blue light emitted from a fine opal, when examined closely are seen to proceed from planes or surfaces of irregular dimensions within the stone, at different depths, and lying at all angles with each other. Occasionally a plane emitting light of one color overlaps a plane diffusing rays of another color, the two being alternately visible by a change in position. The point of most interest in regard to these colors is, that they are not due to any pigment, but are produced by the simple reflection of light from minute strike or issures on the surfaces of the minute strine or fissures on the surfaces of the several planes, as may be proved by slowly turning the stone until a point is reached when no color whatover is emitted. FIRE AT A MILL.-About half past twelve o'clock, this morning, a fire was discovered in the upper part of a four-storied fire-proof building adjoining and belonging to the ex-tensive cotton factory of Messrs. Porter & D ckey, at Howard and Norris streets. The Dekey, at Howard and Norris streets. The structure was originally put up for drying purposes, but at the present time was not used. except the first-floor, where the boilers and engines are located. The building was considerably damaged, the floors, which were it eonly thing combustible, being pretty well destroyed. This structure is connected with the main mill by an iron door at the fourth story. The flames worked their way under story. The flames worked their way under this door, and were almost communicating to the mill, when they were discovered by Chief Engineer Downey. He sent two men up with a section of hose, and thus the main mill was saved from damage, either by fire or water. The loss is estimated at $5,000, and is partly covered by insurance.

The fire originated accidentally. DISTILLERY ON FIRE.—This morning, about four o'clock, a fire broke out in the upper part of the distillery of John W. Boileau, at the corner of Beach and Coates streets. At that time an explosion startled the neighbor-hood, and it is supposed that the fire was caused by the bursting of the metre, which was located in that portion of the building. The roof and upper part of the building were destroyed, and the machinery and fixtures in the lower part were greatly damaged by water. The loss is estimated at $8,000, upon which there is no insurance. At the time of the fire the establishment was in full operation, but the workmen were all engaged in the lower part.

THE RUSH FROM TOWN .- Bricks and mortar have become too hot for those who are fortu-nate enough to be able to get away from the city. The rush for the sea-side this morning was very heavy. About the time for the de-parture of the trains for Atlantic City and Cape May, about every third person met on the street eastward bound had a duster over his arm, and a valise in his hand. The aftermoon trains to day will take away an immense number of people. To-morrow the city will be entirely deserted, except by the unfortunate can't-get-away fellows. Serves it right for be-

The alligator was engaged in the delightful act of carrying off a hog, when he was struck in the eye by a bullet from the trusty gun of a negro. He dropped his prey and made for shore, when another shot in the same place reached him. The negro, with assistance, fastened his alligatorship to the trace chains of two mules, and it was mules assistance, fastened his alligatorship to the trace chains of two mules, and it was mules pulling one way and alligator pulling another for some time, until some other shots rendered the beast senseless. He measured 12½ feet in length, 4½ feet around the stomach, and 12½ feet across the back. His mouth measured 9 inches inside; 18 inches from jawbone to jawbone; 2 feet from tip of mouth to his eye; 8 inches between the eyes. His feet were two feet long; he had 6¼ rings from neck to end of tail, and weighed 425 pounds. These are actual measurements taken on the spot.
