OF PHILADELPHIA.

1890 — CHARTER PERPETUAL.

From Porms by Mollie E. Moore, of Houston, Texas.] THE BIRD IN THE DAGGER TREE A mocking-bird sings in our dagger-tree!

About and above for days,

Above and about the sharp-edged leaves.
She hovered! With manifold ways She strove to enter the heart of the shade, But ever the leaves, like spears, Held her at bay, 'till her breast was wrung And her wings were shaken with fears;

'Tis all on a sudden the sly South wind Stole in from the open sea, and showed her the way; and the bird flew in And sang in the Dagger-tree! She sings, and the tree be thrills to the heart Whenever her voice is heard!
But no bird knows of this entrance way,
None save the mocking-bird!

Dear love, you fenced me out of your heart, You wounded me, held me at bay, Vith sneer or smile, 'till my breast was And my heart bled day on day:

But all on a sudden some fair chance came. (Sudden and fair and unknown!)

And showed me the way, and my hear And dwelt in your heart alone! Hidden away from the envying world

Trest, with a rest divine! but no heart knows of this entrance way, Dear Love, no heart save mine! LITERARY. The New Eclectic for August should read, if for nothing else, for its interesting study of Poe's remarkable prose-poem "Eureka," by William Hand Brown, of Baltimore, in which the poet's anticipations of recent science are considered.
