The Democracy is so hard put to it to get up any opposition to Governor Geary that it has been foolish enough to assail him for an improper use of the pardoning power. It would e difficult to select any feature of Governor Geary's administration more entitled to the pprobation of the people than his exercise of is pardoning prerogative, and the cause must be desperate indeed that has recourse to attacks upon a position as invulnerable as is Governor Geary's on this point. His record is bright and clear, and his public services in this connection deserve especial praise.

The credit of putting a stop to the wholesale disnensation of pardons which has grown up in the form of the remission of sentences b the Criminal Courts of Philadelphia belongs entirely to the administration of Governor Geary. This power of remission claimed by our Criminal Courts was challenged and contested, carried to the Supreme Court by the Attorney-General and decided to be unconsti-

In 1808, one hundred and six pardons were granted, and in the present year the number has reached only forty. Thus the whole list of pardons granted during Governor Geary's adninistration amounts to the small number of 198, or an average of one for each county in the State per annum. during which Backhouse was knocked overboard and drowned. Backhouse was a native of England, and both were sailors on board the vessel. The cause of the difficulty is not very well known at present, but it appears that whisky was at the bottom of the whole affair. No one interfered with them, and they ought from side to side of the vessel until, at ast, Backhouse's opponent got him close to the edge of the vessel. Here a fearful strug-
