The philosophy of the matter seems to be the total eclipse of the sun in the southern hemisphere, showing an apparent connection between the two occurrences. question without regard to the form in which t has been presented. The relator avers that he is a citizen; that he streets, and that the assessors have refused to insert his name on the division transcript because the lower story of the boarding-house is occupied as a tavern, which, it is alleged, is not connected in any way with the rest of the building. He therefore claims that he is a "private resident, actually residing with a private housekeeper," and as such clearly entitled to registration under the second clause The relator further argues that he is not within the prohibition of the third clause of said section, which excludes from registration the persons "boarding at any hotel, tavern, sailors' boarding house, or restaurant." It is sailors' boarding house, or restaurant." It is evident that the question presented is of great practical importance in the execution of this law, for if we hold that a man residing in a private boarding house cannot be placed upon the division transcript, we shall certainly subject a very numerous and respectable class of citizens to serious inconveniences. I do not see why the proprietor of a private boarding house is not a private housekeeper. Shall we say that the house is not private because the head boards his son, and it taking a relative to board does not change the character of a private does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not change the character of a private board does not head boards his son, and it taking a relative to board does not change the character of a private house, is it affected by receiving a stranger as a lodger? It will hardly be contended that it is any the less a private house because it contains one such person, and the moment that is admitted there is an end of this difficulty, for we cannot draw the line and say one two creater experiences ledge. line and say one, two, or six persons may lodge in a house and itstill be private, but that the moment treceives seven it becomes a public house. The true distinction is perfectly well nouse. The true unsunction is perfectly well understood. The public house is for the entertainment of all who come lawfully, and pay regularly. The boarding-house is for the accommodation only of those who are accepted as guests by the proprietor. Such an estabas guests by the proprietor. Such an estab-lishment is as much a private house as if there were no boarders. The learned draftsman of 76; cholera more this statute evidently so thought, for the board-ing house included by the third clause is the sail-ors' boarding-house.
