About one hundred and forty more true bills were found, yesterday, by the Grand Jury, against as many tayern-keepers, for selling liquor without a license, and another batch will probably be disposed of to-day. The Ward constables have reported about two hundred the constable to constable the ward and the usual disinfectants, were hardly able even to mitigate. It occurred to Dr. Hewson to test the power of dry earth to absorb this odor, as the power of dry earth to absorb this odor, as the british government did right when it refused to recognize the Fenian Haggerty as American consult at Glasgow. As the London Star suggests, the President probably did not know anything of the man's record as a Fenian when the constable to compare the power of the wound itself to about the power of dry earth to absorb this odor, as the power of dry earth to absorb this odor, as the first of the wound itself to constable the constable to constable the constable to constable the constable to a constable to onstables have reported about two hundred and forty of these cases in all, out of the four thousand known to exist in Philadelphia. There have now been nearly two hundred true bills found by the Grand Jury for illicit liquorselling; what will be done with them? The penalty for this offence is, properly, a very severe one. The act of April, 1849, provides a fine of ifty dollars for every day of selling liquor with- the Rev. Henry, Moule, vicar of Fordington, gerty. tatal at any time. Mr. Little was born in Kennebunk, and at the time of his death was about 70 years old. Nearly forty years ago, in connection with the late James Brown, he bought out the old firm of Hilliard & Gray, and from that time has been known as the senior partner of the largest-law publishing firm in the country, Little, Brown & Co. He was twice partial first to Miss Hilliard daughter of married; first to Miss Hilliard, daughter of the late Dencon Hilliard, of Cambridge, of whom he had four sons and one daughter, who survive him. His second wife and widow was Miss Wheaton, daughter of Henry Wheaton, the well-known writer on international law. Mr. Little owned a large amount of real estate in Cambridge, and many of the fine residences near Dana Hill are due to his taste and enterprise. Mr. Little's career as a business man is a long and honorable one Integrity, uprightness and great prudence characterized all his business transactions, and his conduct toward his inferiors was gentlemanly, courteous and not overbearing. He was one of the most respected catizens of Cambridge, and was President of the Charles River Bank for was Fresident of the Charles Alver Mank for years. He was also a prominent Director of the Union Horse Railway and the Cambridge Gas Light Company.
