THE NATIONAL LARGE CONVENTION The so-called National Labor Convention, now in session in this city, deserves notice, not so much for the importance of the possible results of its action as for the extraordinary haracter of its demands and of the work which it proposes to accomplish. From the rambling speech of the President and the obscure report of the Executive Committee, we learn that the Convention has determined to do the following things: "To simplify and equalize" taxation; to repudiate the national debt; to prevent the immigration of Chinese laborers; to destroy the money monopoly—in other words, to make a general distribution of capital; "to keep our money out of the hands of foreign capitalists;" "to control certain lines. of transportation!" "to secure the crop to the hands that raise it," or, more plainly, to promote agrarianism; "to overthrow the present money system;" "to establish the principle that the trafficker is the servant of the producer;" to restrict by law the gains of all distributors; to overthrow the old Norman laws of inheritance," and "to demand that something like material equality shall be instituted among us for the benefit of our descendants." Certainly the workingmen of the Labor Union need not remain idle for want of tasks with this tremendous series of operations before them. This programme is radical and evolutionary. It contemplates the entire over- the Navy Department. No want of respect can be shown towards him who drives "the charlot of State" by telling him that he is the reverse to the driver of a hack. When you take a cab you, tell the coachman where to drive you. Quite the contrary, it is the conductor of the charlot of State who drives you where he pleases. He saves you the trouble of giving any address. Once on his vehicle you are his. As he intends to proceed slowly he invites you to sleep but proceed slowly he invites you to sleep, but not to dream. He drops the windows if order to give you fresh alr, and drops the blinds, so that the daylight may not pain you. And when a saiden halt, awakens, you and you look out, and discover, where he is driving you you call out. "Coachman, how is this; I want to go to the Barriere, de l'Etoile?" [Special Despatch to the Phila. Evening Bulletin.] Washington, August 17.—Commissioner Delano is closeted with several supervisors to-day in reference to making a general transfer of supervisors from the districts they are now in to others. This plan is strongly opposed by the supervisors in the Eastern and Middle States, and, if insisted on, will probably cause some to resign rumors about the affair, but the police seem to know nothing about it. One story is that Kelly was cut and then fell overboard. A despatch received at the Central Station, this afternoon, stated than an unknown man had been found drowned at Palmer Street wharf.
