Arrival of Her Passengers at Savannah-Particulars of the Disaster.

The Savannah Republican gives the following account of the loss of the steamer San Jacinto—before briefly reported by telegraph— derived from statements by passengers, twenty-nine of whom liave arrived in that city:

STATEMENT OF A PASSENGER.
We sailed from New York on Saturday afternoon, the 7th instant, at four o'clock. At ten minutes to twelve o'clock on Monday ten minutes to twelve o'clock on Monday morning last she struck on a sand bar opposite the old lighthouse on Body Island. The watch at that time was in charge of the second officer. A strong under current was running. The captain states that he was steering the same course he had usually done.

Immediately upon discovering she was aground five attempts were ineffectually made to get her over the bar, she bursting her steam pipe in the last. The fires were at once extinguished and daylight was anxiously looked for, the tide bringing her in shore all the time. When she struck a number of crates of cabba-

A BOAT SMASHED.

In the attempt one of the steamship's boats was smashed to pieces by the surf, and its occupants, precipitated into the water. They were however, all picked up, but had a narrow escape of their lives. After all the baggage had been brought ashore, a number of gentlemen were lowered by ropes into the boat, they going first so as to give the ladies courage to follow, and safely landed. The boats then took the ladies,, who were equally fortunate. The balance of the crew followed, and at 4 o'clock the steamship was left subject. Early the next morning (Tu and at 4 o'clock the steamship was left subject o'clock, Captain Atkins and Mr. Davis walked to the steamship, the tide having fallen, and found her high and dry in the sand. She was then eight feet in the sand, with no water around except on the shore side. She had one foot of water in her. At eleven o'clock she foot of water in her. At eleven, o'clock sile had four feet, and had hugged eighteen inches on account of the sand washing from under neath her bow and stern.

After the passengers had landed they built a tent, occupied a number of old buildings and made themselves as comfortable as possible under the unfortunate circumstances of the interest of the circumstances of the content of the circumstances of the ROUND TO ENIZABETH CITY (1) 1976.

Captain Atkins had succeeded in chartering two sloops, one of ten and the other of thirteen tons, in which to take the passengers to Elizabeth City, distant sixty-five miles. At half-past one o'clock we started from the island, but there being a dead calm, we were compelled to row, and at six o'clock on Wednesday, morning we reached the city, after arduous work, just in time to take the steamer through the Dismal Swamp to Norfolk, arriving at the latter place at five o'clock in the afternoon. We went to the hotels, our baggare going by the Seaboard and Roanoke ioon. We went to the hotels, our bag-

It may be further remembered, in support of this theory, that one of the most prominent dealers on the street did not offer any bonds to the Government upon the last two occasions of these purchases, and that on Thursday last the entire amount of $1,000,000 was obtained from one house below the them market figure, which offer has not been repeated. It is not impossible to-day that the offerings may greatly exceed the amount to be purchased upon the speculative idea above suggested, but it would not be safe, therefore, to assume that this was the result of another combination.
