The fact was further demonstrated by the experiments of yesterday, when various engines accomplished the feat without any extra effort. The Chief Engineer is now authorized by Councils to resort to such by the experiments of vesterday, when various thorized by Councils to resort to such neasures to increase the supplies as he may determine to be advisable, and we respectfully submit to Mr. Graeff that, the pumping power of the steam-fire engines having heen estabished by actual experiment, no time should be lost in putting them to more efficient use. The use of the ordinary leather hose of the Fire Department is, however, open to a double delay and trouble consequent upon a break in a single section anywhere, are practical difficulties: while the Department could not spare, in case of fire, the twenty or twenty-five thousand feet of hose requisite for the operations of twenty steamers, and less than that number would be of very little service. What is wanted is an main of steam-pipe, of three or four inches diameter, laid by the shortest line to the reservoir from the nearest point, below the dam, accessible to the engines. This main should be fitted with three or four branches. by which as many engines could force water into the main, and by this means a very substantial aid could be given to the present mathinerwat Fairmo unt, without using any of the power needed for the turbines.

If it seems impracticable to any to lay ar impromptu iron main of this description, we have only to say that the doubt indicates a very imperfect estimate of the energies and enterprise of our Philadelphia mechanics. Without conferring with either of our large steam-fitting. establishments, we will hazard the opinion that a concern like Morris, Tasker & Co., for example, would complete such a main as we have indicated, ready for use in less than ten hours from the time they received the order. We are aware that the mechanical difficulties are great. out we are also aware that the ingenuity of our mechanics and machinists is equal to their large resources and their vigorous enterprise. "We are Democrats. We are not Republi-"We are Democrats. We are not Republicans, and if we support the Conservative Republican wing (and this we think advisable) we will do it as Democrats and not as Republicans. Gen. Grant and Congress are aware of the fact that we have not all at once been converted to Republicanism. They know that we support the Republican ticket not from choice, but from necessity. Those who think to mislead the President and Congress into the belief that the people of Mississippi are Republicans, because they support at this time, from sheer necessity, Republican principles and Republican nominees for office, are sadly inistaken. Grant has long since realized the true condition of affairs and knows our political status and our situation. If this is which figure several lots have recently changed hands.
