THE PERILS OF THE SOUND.

A Han Picked Up on Long Island Sound —He Reports that He Was Drugged and Robbed on the Steamer Old Colony and then Thrown Overboard.

JErom the Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin, August 30.] When the screw-steamer Delaware, Captain Benjamin C. Smith, of the independent line Benjamin C. Smith, of the independent line between this city, New London and New York, was on her trip Friday night, from New York for this city, and was distant about three miles from Sands Point east, the Captalu, who was at the wheel, heard a faint voice as of some one in distress. It was about 4 o'clock, and no vessel was in sight. He immediately stopped the steamer, and called the watch below. The voice was again heard somewhat plainer, calling "help," but in the darkness no person was visible. The watch came up promptly, and a boat was lowered and pulled in durection of the voice. After proceeding some fifteen or twenty After proceeding some fifteen or the voice.

After proceeding some fifteen or twenty boats lengths, they found a man in the water, and took him aboard the steamer. He was entirely naked, with the exception of his whirt, and almost exhausted, Captain, Smith had him taken down into the fire-room, gave him stimulants, and dressed him. When he him stimulants, and dressed him. When he had sufficiently recovered he was put to bed and landed at New London on Saturday morning. He gave his name as Richard Hecker, and says that he left New York on the steamer Old Colony, for Boston, Friday

His story, as told to our reporter Saturday evening, at the New London almshouse, where he now remains, is as follows:

where he now remains, is as follows:

"I left New York, Friday afternoon, on the steamer Old Colony, bound to Boston. Just before leaving I was accosted by two men who were going on the same boat. They invited me to take a drink with them, which I did, and I also asked them to drink with me. At this time I think they must have seen my money, which I had in my pocket-book, amounting to fifty-fivefdollars. In the evening I had a faint recollection of some persons seizing hold of me, and directly afterward I found I had a faint recollection of some persons setzing hold of me, and directly afterward I found myself in the water.—I found when I first got overboard that my pocket-book was gone. I tried to swim with my clothes on, but found it very difficult, and removed all my clothing except my shirt. My boots firoubled me most to get off. I then struck out for land, which must have been a mile or more off, but the tide kent mutting me back, and I had which must have been a mile or more off, but the tide kept putting me back, and I had made up my mind that I must finally be drowned, when I saw the light of the steamer Delaware, I judged a mile off and coming toward me. I made every endeavor to get as near her as possible, and when she got in my vicinity I called for help again and again as loudly as possible, but my strength was nearly gone and I feared I should not be heard. It was still might, however, and my voice was heard by Captain Smith, who immediately sent a boat to my reliet, and I was brought on board of the steamer and kindly cared for. I think I was in the water about cared for. I think I was in the water about an hour and a half."

Mr. Hecker was confined to his bed all day Saturday, and is very weak and sore, but will probably be out in a day or two. He says he has been a clerk in a drug store in New York, and has also been employed in the same busi-ness in Boston. He served three years in the ness in Boston. He served three years in the war, and was Hospital Steward in the Fifty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment. He appears to be a very intelligent and honest man. He has no near relatives, he says, in this coun ry. There is but little question but what the poor man was drugged, robbed, and then thrown querboard by the scoundrels who made his acquaintance before leaving New York.

Some kind citizens of New London will probably supply him with needed clothing and funds necessary for him to reach Boston, where funds necessary for him to reach Boston, where he has acquaintances and can get employment. His story, as told our reporter, is the same that he told Captain Smith, and there is no reason to doubt its entire truthfulness. Captain Smith also says that from the time the Old Colony passed him until he heard Hecker's cries for help, was a little over an hour, and he must have been in the water about that time.

ARRIVAL OF MONITORS IN NEW

Surmises as to What They are Intended For. [From the New Orleans Picayane, Aug. 26.] For some time past the Cubans in this city have been quite elated by the belief that belligerent rights would soon be accorded to the revolutionists in Cuba by both the United States and Peru, and the arrival of three of the five monitors, whose departure from Mound City (on the Mississippi river in Illinois) has been chronicled, seemed to give some color to their statements. The three monitors that have arrived are lying just below the city and are in a very dilapidated condition, certainly not ready for any active sea service, and the two others which are at present aground this side of Memphis are thought to be in a similar condition. There has been considerable mystery about the movements of siderable mystery about the movements of these monitors and those connected with them —a wise shake of the head and non-committal shrug of the shoulder being about all that can be elicited from any of the officers, who in all probability know but little more than those who question them. One thing is certain, however—the Cubans here regard the appearance of these monitors as significant of the intention of the government of the United States to accord beligerent rights to their countrymen and are jubilant over the fact. It is certain, also, that if these to be completely overhauled at considerable expense. One of these vessels is named Hecate and another Fury—warlike names, EXPENSIVE FUN.-Ald. Eggleton heard, yesterday, a curious case arising under the law for the prevention of cruelty to animals. The for the prevention of cruelty to animals. The prisoners were five Germans, employed in a cooper shop in the neighborhood of Front and Master streets. In the shop there were two terrier dogs. A cat leaped into the yard. The defendants thought they would have a little fun. They incited the dogs to attack the cat. Puss fought bravely, but the canines were too much for her, and she was finally overcome and pretty nearly forn to pieces. This might have been considered very funny while it was going on, but the men didn't think there was quite so much fun in it, when the magistrate requested them to fork over $5 fine and $2 costs, and to enter bail in the sum of $500 to keep the peace. The Alderman's demands were complied with, and the Germans left the office, muttering about the queerness of the laws of "dis free country."

The wounds are not serious, however. Eberle was arrested by Policeman Harrar, of the Seventh District. He was taken before Alderman Toland, and has committed in default of $1,000 bail.

The Burning of the Pacific Railroad Snow Sheds.

[From the St. Louis Despatch.]

Our readers are probably aware that long sections of the Central Pacific Railroad are covered with sheds to protect the track from the snow. This defence is but routielly effect. the snow. This defence is but partially effective. Travel was seriously interrupted last winter—both—on—the—Central—and—Union winter—both—on—the Central—and—Union—Pacific, by snow, and we presume the same thing will happen every—winter.—But if the roofing in of the road were—a remedy against the snow, it is a remedy—worse than the disease. Sheds may protect the road from snow, but what will protect the sheds from fire? The event recorded to-day answers the question. The sheds have been all swent away by tire and the voud is been all swept away by fire, and the road itself so seriously damaged that the trains have stopped running. It may be a week before travel is resumed. The category of railway casualties is now enriched with a class of accidentary onlines. casualities is now enriched with a class of accidents peculiar to the Pacific Railroad. The traveler may see the shedded, winding road metamorphosing itself before his eyes into a huge serpent of fire which it would be death to approach. A road which is overwhelmed by snow in the winter and scourged by fire in the summer does not answer the essential conditions of a Pacific Railroad.

Something About Duels.

The duelling season (says the London Daily News) seems again to have returned. The example set by M. Poeze and Mr. Reginald Russell was quickly followed by M. Flourens and by that enthusiastic partisan of the French empire, the quarrelsome deputy and journalist M. Paul de Cassagnac. In Italy the deputies are also doing the best among themselves to kill each other. There is the duel between Signor Curzio and Signor Civinini. Then, Signor Frambri has sent his seconds to the Deputy Righetti. Though Signor Righetti has refused the challenge, on the ground that as a journalist he had a right to criticise Signor Frambri in his public capacity, he is willing nevertheless to fight any respectable person who will present himself instead of Signor Frambri. This may probably end in a fight; for in exactly similar circumstances Signor Arbid fought against Signor Oliva, instead of Signor Brenna, who was the offended party.
"Is this duelling never to end? Kings, it is said, have generally pronounced against it in vain—notably Louis XIV. But in England it is stopped, and elsewhere energetic action on the part of the authorities has had at least a mitigating effect. Among the many staunch opponents of duelling may be mentioned the Emperor Nicholas of Russia. An anecdote is related of a stratagem adopted by the Czar to avert an encounter which the Emperor Napoleon might have imitated, perhaps, in favor of such an adherent as the editor of the Journal de l'Empire. One day an aide-de-camp of the Emperor Nicholas threw himself at his feet, and begged as an extraordinary favor from his sovereign permission to fight a duel. The Emperor immediately and emphatically refused. But,

Sire, I am dishonored; I must fight, cried the disconsolate aide. The Czar frowned, and asked him what he meant. I have been struck in the face, was the ready reply. "Well, said in the face, was the ready reply. Well, said the Emperor, for all that, thou shalt not fight; but come—come with me.' And, taking him by the arm, the Emperor led him into the presence of his Court, which was assembled in an adjoining saloon. Then, in view of the divisor of his court, the Emperor led him all the Emperor his court, which was assembled in an adjoining saloon. flower of his realm, the Emperor kissed the cheek of the aide-de-camp which had received the blow. 'Go, now,' he exclaimed; 'and be at peace; thy affront has been effaced.'"

How Cuckoos CARRY THEIR EGGS .- A correspondent of Land and Water contributes the following item of observations on this subject: Having observed in a magazine of last year the mention of a cuckoo having been shot on the wing, and having, on being picked up, slipped an entire egg out of its mouth, I re-solved to inquire if there were any natural provision for securing the egg in the throat while the bird is seeking a proper place in which to deposit it. I fortunately found a bird-stuffer in the very act of preparing a specimen of this eccentric creature with the throat laid open. At my request he put his knife to the skin of the part immediately below the mouth, and exposed just such a sac as I was looking for, empty, but large enough to hold an egg. He afterwards put a bradawl down the throat, and, with a little care, found an orifice distinct from the gullet, just behind the tongue, leading into a cavity closed at the lower end. This was evidently the sac which he had previously pierced, from within, a little above the base. It would be well if some clever anatomist would carefully extract the internal membrane of the throat of the bird and give an accurate description or drawing of it, including the larynx, which must have a peculiarity of its own. If I have not been mistaken I think the existence of this sac, coupled with the incident above mentioned proves that the method of this bird is first to lay the egg on the ground, and then to swallow it into the special receptacle and carry it away to place it in the first convenient nest it may

FIRE-PROOF BAFES.

CHAMPION SAFES!

PHILADELPHIA, August 27, 1869. Messes. FARREL, HERRING & CO.:

GENTLEMEN: In the year 1836 I unfortunately was in business in the Artisan Building, which was destroyed by fire on the 10th of April. I had then in use what I sup-posed was a Fire-proof Safe, but upon opening it I found everything destroyed, and fire burning therein. You will recollect, gentlemen, there was several of your safes in that fire, also several in the fire at Sixth and Commerce streets, the next. May, five weeks afterwards, all of which upon being opened proved they were fire-proof indeed, for I witnessed the opening of most of them, and in every case the contents were preserved. while safes of other makers were partially or entirely destroyed. Lat once concluded to have something that I could depend upon, and purchased one of your safes.

The safe I purchased of you at that time was subjected to a white heat (which was witnessed by several gentle men that reside in the neighborhood) at the destruction of my Marble Paper Factory, 921 Wallace street, on the of my Murble Paper Factory, 221 Wallace street; on the afternoon and evening of the 24th inst. After digging the safe from the ruins, and opening it this morning, I was much pleased to find everything, consisting of books, papers, allow and silverware, all right. I shall want another of your safes as soon as I can get a place to continue my business in. I could not rest contented with any other make of safes
