Fem and Ink Sketch of Prince Napoleon.

Paus, Sept. 7.—As Prince Napoleon's speech has made him quite conspicuous; I cannot send you anything more interesting than a pen-and ink portrait of him, containing many things set down in malice. The effect of his speech in the Senate was great. One of the messengers of the Senate was great. One of the messenge lation, the frumpet voice of Prince Napoleon. He said the Senate looked as if Medusa were in the tribune. Prince Napoleon's speech may be considered an extempore effort. He had studied the subject carefully, and had thought over the tone of argument he should adopt, but he did not expect to deliver it for two days. M. de la Gueronniere and M. Sainte-Beuve were to speak before him; but the former was called out of town by business which would take no denial, and the latter fell suddenly ill. take no denial, and the latter fell suddenly ill. members, whenever he chooses, that he is the Trince Napoleon's friends assert that the French Emperor approves the speech. Here is the sketch:

Terrible Fight with a Grizzly Bear.
A correspondent of the Chicago Tribine writes from the Wind River Valley, Rocky Mountains, under date of August 30: "After our camp had been pitched on Bear Creek, we sallied out to gather some of the Creek, we sallied out to gather some of the wild cherries, gooseberries and currants that grow in abundance about the camp. Mr. Crutcher, the guide, Major Gordon, Lieutenant Stambaugh, and several others of our party, accompanied by a number of soldiers, repaired to the creek near by, and began eating the fruits with which its barks, were lived. Presently with which its banks were lined. Presently, Major Gordon's attention being attracted by a Crutcher, and asked who the man on his right was. Crutcher gave one look, a shout of Bear! bear! and beat a hasty retreat. Standing on his hind feet, and drawing the limbs through his mouth with his paws, was a monster Rocky Mountain grizzly bear. OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—Important despatches have been received from Lord Granville in reference to the admission of British Columbia to the Canadian Confederation. He IN THE National Musical Convention, in Strongly urges upon Gov. Musgrove and the Boston, yesterday, L. H. Southard, of Balti-Council the propriety and the advantage of ment of worship. He protested against the adoption of popular, vulgar music in churches, and did not deem the music now in use adapted to congregational singing, and consequently, favored organs as a choice. Other speakers followed, agreeing with Mr. Southard that Protestant Church music, except in the Protestant Episcopal Church, has been retrograding for the past twenty years. The Convention closed with a convert last evening.
