The Indian Archipelago is the country the nutmeg. It grows on trees, which commence to bear at the age of seven years, continue to bear fer many years, like ou apple. From flowering to the ripening of the fruit is about seven months. The average product of a tree in full bearing is five pounds of nutmegs and one and a quarter pounds of mace. The harvest is from September to Decemb but a small harvest is made in May and June. The mace is an imperfect covering for the nut-meg (not the husk). The mace is flattened by the hands and laid on mats to dry in the sun. fterward it is dried by coal fires, and packed or exportation. The nutmegs are more difficult to dry. They are dried by fire alone for without much smoke. When thoroughly dried Range of the Human Eve.
