always with him the meekness and gentlen of Christ. Earnest in every good word and work. He walked with God, and was not, for God took him. Old Christ Church bells are ringing In soft and muffled tone; The faithful shepherd of the flock From earthly scenes has gone

Wrapped in his snowy surplice With fragrant flowers o'erspread His people pause, with tearful glance, To view the honored dead.

In the dim aisles are gathered The young and old once more, While visions of a vanished past, Like spectres, throng the floor. The men so wise in counsel. So valiant in the fray, The Saintly White long since gone ho Are they not here to-day?

We hear the dirge-like music-The doors wide open swing, And surpliced priests, with mournful trea Precede the form they bring Once more before the altar. Where he so long has stood, Pleading in the dear Saviour's name, And through his precious blood,

Striving to save the wayward, The wilful and the blind; In screet grief, his comfort still In duty sure to find. No selfish rest for weary feet But onward still he trod. His source of strength full well we knew Communion with his God

The little child, the hoary head, Each felt his loving care. The kindly grasp, the cheerful tone Both rich and poor might share. But now we see a vacant seat. Shrouded his household pew The face we loved to look upon No more shall met our view.

Oh! pastor loved and tender Are all thy teachings o'er Thy voice, like music to the ear Shall it ne'er greet us more? In days of joy and sadness, We looked alike for thee Our joy to share, our grief to soothe With earnest sympathy.

Well done, thou faithful servant Enter joyfully thy rest, While the leaves of early autumn Spread their mantle o'er thy brea Thou hast borne the heat and burde Of a long and toilsome day, And we know for thee 'tis bette To be called from earth away.

Thou hast been true and faithful To thy country and thy God, And wherever duty pointed With unflinching ardor trod Thou art girded for the conflict And we well may wine our tear Since death may claim no victory, For thou art free from fears.

thine is the precious prom To faithful pastors given,-As stars to shine through coming time, Forevermore in Heaven. Thy life one long evangel, Of all men known and read Its neaceful close the calm repose Which crowns the holy dead!

A holy song of triumph, We well may sing for thee, Thou faithful servant of the Lord, From earthly bondage free The cross and crown, fit tokens Of thy life, and sure reward-To dwell with saints in glory, And with our risen Lord.
