Erie Railrord Affairs. [Special Despatch to the Phila, Evening Bulletin.] NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The Erie Railroad NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The Erie Railroad people are receiving large quantities of western produce now since the repair of the Narrowsburg bridges on Wednesday last, The cause of the delay at this bridge was the con-stant sweeping away of trestle work under the new structure by rafts of lumber running against the supporters. The Delaware river is now quite low, and the bridge is again per-fectly safe, and trains are running again. No less than forty trains of eastern-bound freight for the New York and eastern markets ar-rived at Jersey City on Sunday, and thirfy-two wetrains, averaging about 18 cars each, arrived yesterday. 616 cars arrived on Sunday. The amount of western freight is very large, and yesterday. 616 curs arrived on Sunday. The-amount of western freight is very large, and fifteen trains were despatched by the Com-pany on Sunday and eighteen yesterday. Yesterday afternoon a freight train, drawn by engine 238, Engineer Decker, ran off the track at Ridgewood, blocking both tracks completely. The accident occurred through a misunderstanding of orders. At Ramapo, engine 208 unfortunately ran off the track during the afternoon, but the tracks were expected to be cleared before midnight. This accident occurred through the displacement of a rail. No persons were hurt by either accident. About eight hundred acars are coming over the Delaware Division

cars are coming over the Delaware Division each day, bound East. -----A DIAMOND OF EIGHT OUNCES. A Precions Stone as Big as a Lemon Found in Australia.

Found in Australia. [From the London Times, Oct. 6.] The discovery of a diamond weighing three-quarters of a pound, and worth on a moderate estimate twenty millions of money, would be an event calculated to leave a mark even on this age of sensations. We only regret that we cannot quite announce it as a fact. A stone, however, assumed to be precious, and defined in successive telegrams as a diamond, a topaz, and a nondescript, has actually been found in the Australian gem-sand. "The thing," as our correspondent irreverently calls it, is as big as a large lemon, it weighs between seven and eight ounces in the scale, and it might, as people say, be anything for all that could be told. To enable the reader to speculate on the possible marvel, and appreciate the phenomenon at its proper worth, we will just explain what it means, or would mean, if actually realized. Diamonds are measured by their, weight in carats, a carat being four grains. The largest diamond of which we in this country have any practical knowledge is the famous Koh-incor, which in its historical shape, as shown at the Exhi-bition of 1861, weighed 186 carats, or 744 grains. The new Australian diamond would weigh about 900 carats, or 3,600 grains—just about five times as much. Diamonds, however, increase of weight; so that, whereas the Koh-i-noor was computed to be worth, accord-ing to the ascending scale of prices, some 2,-600,000, the Australian stone would be valued by a jeweler at far more than five times that to prove the value of a diamond by the rates of a conventional table, but as no purchasers could be found with millions in their pockets, the estimate is entirely nominal. The real value of a thing is what it will bring, and no stone could be actually sold for a million. If point of fact, this limitation of market values was very soon reached in the late buoyancy of the trade. Up to a certain point the value of diamonds rose greatly about the value of diamonds rose greatly about the value of diamond is rose greatly above was very soon reached in the late buoyancy of the trade. Up to a certain point the we cannot quite announce it as a fact. A teresting to learn by and by what this "reputed" diamond turns out to be, but, as regards the mere possibilities of the case, we may remark that "there is already a "reputed" diamond in the world weighing actually twice as much as the Australian gem. This wonderful stone is, or was, in the Portnguese Treasury, among the crown jewels of the kingdom, fortunately, that is about the amount of knowledge we possess in the case, for the amount of knowledge we possess in the case, for the amount of or something else.
