The now famous Pope's Syllabus, which must be adopted or rejected at the Œcumenical Council as a rule of faith and action, is a systematic and sweeping condemnation of everything which may be comprehended in the modern idea of civil liberty—the entire rivilization of our time. Its history best explains it. Five years ago—in December, 1864—the Pope issued an Encyclical Letter taking a very despondent view of the condition—pointical, social and religious—of the entire world. Accompanying this paper was the Syllabus, a schedule of charges and specifications. It contained ten general charges, each upported by just exactly eight specified erors, or "damnable heresies." The general harges are labeled materialism, ritualism, pantheism, socialism, etc. The specifications remore precise. They are: The freedom of he press, Bible societies, liberal clerical associations, the independence of Ohurch and tate, the civil contract of marriage as opposed of the governmental view, education outside if the control of the Roman Catholic Church, he objects and functions of legislation, the residence of clean and live the modern in the residence of clean and live the modern in the residence of clean and live the modern in the residence of clean and live the modern in the residence of clean and live the modern in the residence of clean and live the modern in the residence of clean and live the modern in the control of the Roman Catholic Church, he objects and functions of legislation, the residence of clean and live the modern in the control of the Roman Catholic Church, he objects and functions of legislation, the residence of clean and live the modern in the control of the control of the governmental view, education the residence of clean and live the modern in the control of the control the control of the Roman Catholic Church, he objects and functions of legislation, the relations of clergy and laity, the modern idea of ound government and the relations of the overned to the governing, the views held by early all educated men as to the functions and limits of human reason, and the objects, owers and results of scientific investigation, twill be seen that the indictment of the Sylbrogovers the whole structure of modern
