Saturday, November 13, 1869. UNION AND DISUNION. There have been two ecclesiastical even during the present week of much importance to the religious world. The most interesting of these, the re-union of the Presbyterian Church, we have already referred to. It is a consummation most devoutly wished for by the denomination for years past. For several years it has engaged the earnest attention of the two General Assemblies. The earlier propositions to unite were looked upon coldly and with suspicion. The old prejudices of those who had been trained in all the dogmatic theology of the two divisions of the Presbyterian Church vielded, slowly at first, to the logic of good,

The stock market has drifted into what is technically known as a brokers' market—that is, the orders from jutifiers are very few, and the brokers deal with each arable mother, seeing her children on the point of embarking on a perllous enterprise, would be bathed in tears, and would beg them return. You know, soldiers of the valiant Thousand Phalanx, that this brave and noble woman smile, which she has perhaps to-day lost like the tears shed under the weight of sublime troubles, she said: "Why did you not tell me, my dear friends? Have I ever prevented you my dear friends? Have I ever prevented you from going where men are fighting for liberty? Go, and may God direct you!" God heard the prayer of the pious woman, and this benediction was a happy presage for the modern Argonauts.
