|From the Overland Monthly for December.] EXPECTATION. BY CHARLES WARREN STODDARD.

What news, I wonder, from the south ! I saw a sail blow past the Head. I wonder if my lovers still Are watching for me from the hill, Whereon the palms are dry with drouth, And ferns are crisp and dead I wonder if my lovers yet

Are all beginning to forget How dear the day was when we sat Upon our island Ararat, While floods were beating at its base, And winds in anger seemed to frot Our new-found dwelling-place!

he bark was driving on the beach : How far life seemed beyond our reach! How far life seemed beyond our reach! The shore was thronged with savage men They plunged into the surf, and then, Above the breakers' deat/ning roar, hey gave us each some cheering speec And helped us to the shore. What sweet, unprofitable hours We passed within the silent land :

Calm, or impatient; sadly mute, Or merry in a mild dispute; Long days of summer, ripe and hale, Our horizon hemmed in with flowers, Lill, rescued by a passing sail, We gave each dusky friend a hand, 'And parted on the sand.

I wonder how my lovers are ! I wonder if the lime has shed The name I cut upon its bark ! I wonder if they speared the sharl

We chased one night by torch and star-He had our pet kid in his mouth! The sea rolls in with easy swell; I saw a sail blow past the Head; "She's from the line," I heard it said-* And there is where my lovers dwell, Along the burning south.

THE CREAM OF THE NEW BOOKS.

Miss Mittord's Letters. From the new Life of Mary Russell Mitfor related in a selection from her correspondence with her friends, edited by Rev. A. G. L'Es trange, and just published by Bentley, London, may be selected a great number of pleasant examples of the art epistolary, as understood in the beginning of the century. Without further preface we give a few samples. This is of the date of 1814:

"A few days ago I had a visit from two la dies, the wife and sister of an officer of rank | looks like the holidays is their mode of conveyseated, and all compliments at an end, we asked of course after the Colonel; upon which | then they had a hump-backed boy on a donkey the lady wife produced a newly-received letter | galloping after them by way of footman to and read some entertaining military details. | carry their books." 'But now,' said she, suddenly stopping, 'here

In the same year, Miss Mitford writes :---"Yesterday I went, as you know, to the play with papa, and on our road thither had a ery great pleasure in meeting Lord Wellington, just arrived in London, and driving to his own house in an open carriage and six. e had an excellent sight of him, so excellent ever actor of the name of Smith, whom they

Indeed, between crying and blushing, brides and bridesmails too do box. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $2,000 and blushing, brides and bridesmaids too do generally look strange figures; I am sure we lid-though, to confess the truth, I really could not cry, much as I wished to keep all my neighbors in countenance, and was forced to hold my handkerchief to my eyes and sigh in vain for 'ce don de dames que Dieu ne m'a pas donné.' I don't really think if I were married myself I should have the grace to shed a tear. For the rest all went off extremely well, except two small accidents, one of which discomposed me very much. One of my fellow-bridesmaids put on her skirt wrong-side outwards, and hough half a dozen abigails offered to transplant the lace and bows from one side to the other, and though I all but went down on my knees to beg her not to turn it, turn it she would. and turn it she did-the obstinate! The other mischance was our entirely forgetting to draw any cake through the ring, so that our fate still rests in abeyance. The bride and ar second sister set off to Brighton, and and the youngest remained to do the honors of the wedding-dinner. Of course we all got tipsy-those who were used to it. comfortably enough, and those who were not. rather awkwardly-some were top-heavy and wanted tying up like overblown carnations, some reeled, some staggered-and one fell, and catching at a harp for a prop, came down with s supporter, and a salver of collee which he knocked out of the servant's hands; such a Phoebe was in that state which is of all others most favorable to the admission o lover she had just lost an old one. Mi Philip W - to whom she was engaged, had very fairly jilted her and married another lady. So to Reading she came, and the Doctor moned his sons, according to promise. From London, from college, from ship-board they came; but, unluckly, when they arrived the fair damsel was invisible. She had taken cold on her journey, and was in the paroxysm of a rheumatic fever. The Doctor, liewever, took heart. He set the firstclass 'Miss R----' for a theme English verse. Is not this a fine stroke of sional gallantry! And he sent up the nelodious produce to the fair inspirer, by his eldest and favorite son, the identical Richard who is now her husband. He did not content himself with sending up copies of verses, bu tea and oranges, coffee and flummery (I myself saw a basin of the last so conveyed). People wondered a little at the Doctor's French manners: but he knew the sex, or at least he knew the flummery, the love and the lemonade; she los her heart and her fever; and when she left her room at the end of three weeks she was again an engaged woman. Seriously, however, this singular courtship has mellowed into a very strong and sincere attachment-an attachment which has weathered many storms, and has at last, perhaps, precipitated them into a marriage of affection rather than of prudence. 1 most sincerely wish them happy."

"The Duke of Wellington's sons are at home for the Eton holidays, and they come every day o a little alchouse next door, to take lessons in French of a Jew, who is lodging there pur-posely to teach them. 'The poor little lads, ma'am,' said my neighbor, the landlord, 'are kept very strict; they never look up but their ator corrects them; and there they sit in my parlor from eleven o'clock till half-past four and never have a glass of anything.' Without symathizing very deeply in the last grievance enumerated by my friend of the tap-room. I am quite indignant at the poor little boys being cheated their holidays. Learning French, poor souls, when they ought to be playing cricket, or stealing birds' nests, or doing mischief, or doing nothing! Beating Napoleou was a joke o this wickedness. It would be usedark eyes, and something of a look of the very less for me to say anything about the lecture, had at Reading two or three years ago. ness, but a little examination convinces me that this dullness is mainly confined to trade, while manufacturing seems quite brisk. Carbuilding is apparently very brisk, and it is an immense business here. Iron ship-building, which is probably our most important industry, though rather sleepy, is by no means dead, and i learn that the Harlan & Hollingsworth Comnany will shortly lay the keel of a larger ship than they have ever yet built. Machinists. too, and all other workers in iron, seem to be quite busy. Wilmington is rapidly becoming a great "iron city," and now, just above her northern border, on the Delaware river, are being erected immense iron works, which, shall tell you more about them when they are strong expressions were used on both sides— one calling the other a "cheat," and the other retorting by the term "miser." Annon, intent on paving herself, seized the handle of a basket of eggs which Jeanneton carried; a struggle ensued, the eggs began to fly furiously and fast, and both combatants were freely bespattered about the face and neck with yok and shell. An elegantly dressed young gentleman in the crowd made himself somewhat pro-minent by inappropriate mirth; this diverted the anger of Annon and Jeanneton from each other, and their concentrated wrath fell upon the head of him who mocked them.  Samuel Bispham, W. J. Carson, Difference duels in the complete destruction of his irreproach-able garments, and his utter confusion. There can be little doubt that the egg might with advantage be substituted for the sword in French duels. In nine cases out of ten, the damage done, and the annoyance inflicted, by the egg would exceed that which is produced by the employment of the deadlier weapon. MEDICAL

For the Renovation of the Hair.

A dressing w is at once agreeable healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color and the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened. falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured y its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can. only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING. nothing else can be found so desirable.

Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts longer on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume. Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,
