clear water of truth and common sense is gradually wearing away the adamantine prejudice which has, for so many years, resisted reform in the volunteer Fire Department of this city. Of all the reforms urged and promoted by the BULLETIN during the nearly twenty-three years of its existence, none have been so stubbornly resisted as the establishment of a Paid Fire Department. Journalistically speaking, we have grown gray in pressing this subject upon the minds of the people of Philadelphia, who, ready as they have been to adopt other suggestions and inaugurate other reforms, have been almost hopelessly slow to accept arguments which could not be answered, to correct abuse which could not be lenied, and to introduce a reform, the value and need of which has long been admitted. We have never lost our faith in the advantges and the entire feasibility of a good Paid ire Department; and we have had the satisfaction of seeing the tide slowly turning in the right direction, the rock slowly wearing away, and editorial pens which, like the vane on the Ledger Building, are always quick to turn with THINGS BY THE THOUSAND the shifting wind, brandishing themselves bravely in the fore-front of a more than halfwon battle-field, in whose trenches we have willingly delved, and at whose batteries we have hopefully fought for nearly a score of Of Beaver, years. Best of all, our old foes, the firemen themselves, are at last coming over and reinforcing us with their honest admissions that they are tired and disgusted with the management of the Volunteer system, and will be glad to see the Paid Fire Department established. The decent, respectable men of the Department have come to the only conclusion that is possible, in view of the rowdyism, inefficiency and bad management of a large proportion of the present department. They are thoroughly sick of it, and while their natural esprit du corps still keeps them in the ranks of active service, they are ready to welcome the legislation that will abolish the present miserable condition of affairs, and establish a compact, efficient, well-regulated body of paid firemen. such as are to be found in almost every large city of the world except Philadelphia.
