A LOTTERY WAR IN NEW YORK.

Ben Wood and John Merrissey at Swords'

The New York Sunsays:

The persons engaged in the lottery business — men who are well known to this community — have from time to time during the last two years figured quite prominently before the public as litigants in our Courts of Justice.

Before proceeding further, it may be proper to state here that the statute expressly declares lotteries unlawful and a common and a public nuisance, and enacts that wheever shall be devere shall be either of imprisoned, or both, in the discretion of the Court. But to frame laws in our State is one thing, and their faithful administration another.

In 1867, and for seme years previous, the lottery business in this and the other chief cities of the United States was conducted under lottery grants and contracts, held in trust by Messrs. Simmons, Murray & Davis. The beneficiary interest under this trust deed was divided into shares, which were assignated the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, to Simmons, who, b, is in the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, to Simmons, who, b, is in the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, to Simmons, who, b, is in the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, to Simmons, who, b, is in the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, to Simmons, who, b, is in the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, to Simmons, who, b, is in the case of the correct of the carried to their homes. The body of the owner of some of these shares, sofit them in December 1867, t was divided into shares, which were assignable on certain conditions.

The Hon. John Morrissey, having become the owner of some of these shares, soft them in December, 1867, to Simmons, who, by, his contract with Morrissey, was, on falling to comply with its provisions, to forfeit any sums already paid and all title to the property sold.
