COUNT MONTALEMBERT.

A Remarkable Letter. Count Montalembert has addressed the following letter to the Swiss students at Valois excited considerable attention in France and Rome:

Last year, he writes, at this time, you did me the honor to address me a touching testi-mony of your interest, and I am assured that you desire to receive from me this year some words of sympathy and encouragement. I am more affected than surprised, for it rarely happens that the young feel they have need of the old. Then in what way can I be useful? Excited at 40 from white life condensed to the control of the control o public life, condemned by strange and cruel sufferings to a premature oldness, buried before being dead, I ought appear to you separated from all things here below. Nevertheless, I still retain my interest in conflicts analagous to those which formerly inflamed me. This interest redoubles when I see new generations descend into the arena, there to encounter the same obstacles, errors and trials as their predecessors. I always tremble to see them yield to discouragement or indifference, as the genera-tion which arose in France after the revolution which arcse in France after the revolu-tion of 1848 and the coup d'etat of 1851. Even when I am not called upon I feel myself in-duced to say to young men: "Courage and confidence! Work energetically for the good cause, for truth, justice and liberty, and be certain that you will never repent." It is not good taste to cite oneself as example, but greater service can scarcely be rendered to the young than to enable them to profit by the experience of others. Allow me, therefore, to declare to you, I-who have agitated spoken and written so much, and often without any immediate success—only regret that I have not written, spoken, agitated more, while it was still possible for me to do so. At the close of every career, long or short, brilliant or obscure, there remains nothing more bright and consoling here below than the recollection of the labors and sacrifices devoted to the eternal conflict of good against evil, of truth against falsehood.

It is necessary to labor and to sow without counting upon the harvest, but with the cer-tainty that this harvest, although made by others, will be favorable to the triumph of right. It is difficult to achieve this principle, but still it is achieved, and since the coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ it has slowly but incontentably advanced. History, according with reason, proves this every day to those who study it sincerely. The present is better than the past, and the future will be better than the present,

It is you, good and dear young men, who will be the men of the future and on each of

will be the men of the future, and on each of you in your own sphere will rest the responsibility of it. You should not devote this duty to blind regrets or puerile utopias. I have been as a historian and polemist the laborious apologist of the Catholic system. But I revolt with indignation against those who draw therefrom, like the greater part of the present religious organs, furious diatribes and ridicule against the modern spirit, or programmes of theoretical or autocratical instruction which that spirit, thank God, will never accept.

Referring to contentions in Switzerland he says: "You who live in a country which the friends of liberty love to cite at the same time as the United States of America, know better than I how far your noble country is still from resembling our model beyond the sea. When they read the discussions in your assemblies, and see the acts which cumanate from them, they are stupified at the great part which confiscation, prohibition and proscription still play in them, as witness what has recently occurred in Thurgovic and the Berne Jura. Nothing could less resemble the manner and customs of the sons of Washington and Franklin. These unhappy disturbances, foolish exclusions, and shameful anachronisms will, however, show you sufficiently what are the progressive measures, the urgent reforms, and the arduous conflicts of which you should be the indomitable champions, in order that in the country of Tell and Winkelried that true liberty may reign, which sooner or later will become the inalienable patrimony of her sincere defenders.

He refers to the reforms peaceably acquired in France, and says: "During the second Empire I have been cited three times before the Correctional Police, for writing what to-day might be said freely by any one, under the same regime, hap-pily modified. It is thus that the scandal of the eye becomes the truth of the morrow."

A NEW YORK ROW.

Hezekiah L. Bateman Smites Hiram Cranston on the Cheek at the Man-battan Club--Donning the War Paint and Feathers--The Tennahawk Ex-humed and the Calumet Buried. The Herald this morning says:

A wild war whoop swept out from the glittering portals of the lodge of the Manhat-tans about an hour after the setting of the sun last night, and at once the savages of the order commenced to buckle on their war gear for a contest that will in all probability terminate with the extinction of the Manhattan Club as separate and individual confederacy. It was virtually an eucroachment on the sacred "game" reserves that in this as in sacred "game" reserves that in this many other savage wars led to the lighting many other savage wars led to the lighting of clubs, of the council fires, the unslinging of clubs, the replenishment of quivers and the bending of the bows. It appears that one of the brethren, Hezekiah L. Bateman by name, and by profession well known as one famed in deeds of theatrical prestige, on Wednesday evening invited those pale-faces who were his friends to sup with him within the sacred confines of the lodge. Now these friends were not of the fraternity of Manhatana and according to the sacred confines of the fraternity of Manhatana and correct the safety in the t tans, and were therefore, in the eyes of the brotherhood, so to speak, part and parcel of the great unwashed. The rules of the great council, known as the House Committee, pro-vide that no outsider shall partake of the hospitality of the cuisinieri in the public dining-room, and Hezekiah had infringed this very rule by inviting the friends above alluded to to a seat in the banqueting chamber and ordering for their entertainment some of the rarest and most delicate of the spoils of the chase, done up brown, or, more properly speaking, in the highest style of cookery, whether that style necessitated their being done brown" or rare.

"done brown" or rare.

Hiram Cranston, once the proprietor of the famed lodge known as the New York Hotel, is one of the presiding chiefs of the great council, and, deeming the intrusion of the outsiders a flagrant violation of the rules governing the presence of guests, sent a flunkey to direct imperatively that Hezekiah withdraw, or at least withdraw his friends. Among the latter were Mr. Samuel Ward and James Connolly, nephew of the Comptroller. James Councily, nephew of the Comptroller. Bateman declined to retire or to allow his friends to leave, and the result was that Mr. Cranston sent a message which, under any circumstances, would be deemed deticient in courtesy. In fact, the whole proceeding, on the part of the latter gentleman, was deemed discourteous, as the ordinary custom would have been to permit the strangers or guests to have enjoyed the entertainment, and to have called the member to account before the House Committee for breach of rules.

The matter created much comment, as a large number of the members were present at the time, and those who were not present were, of course, duly informed of the affair by the quid nuncs. Of course, the matter was not the quid nuncs. Of course, the matter was not bettered by being made a subject of gossip, and several notes passed between Mossrs. Bateman and Cranston, each one of which, it was surmised, was a challenge to a trial of lead and coffee. Ultimately Cranston de-elined any further correspondence, and the dispute was left in a decidedly ugly aspect. Things brightened up, however, about seven o'clock last evening, as Mr. Batemen, burning under the knowledge that when he had sought an explanation he was insulted, walked cheerfully into the club room, and seeing Cranston there, deliberately slapped him in the face.

There was a grand scene of confusion for the time, and everybody kept his individual eye on Cranston, expecting that Hezekiah, by his temerity, had precipitated a "Hastings" upon

The long roll was sounded and the alarm was brayed out for the assembling of the forces, and Cranston shouted lustily for the police. Finally, two of the servants were despatched in search of some of the blue coats and clubs, and one went frantically along Fourteenth street, while the other spanked a a fremendous pace up the avenue. But there was no policeman to be found, and when the tired messengers returned Bateman had taken his departure, and there was no one left

Pistols, and probably a little coffee, with a few rods of clear ground, just over one of the Weehawken hills, are in active demand and are deemed inevitable.

ANOTHER MINE DISASTER.

Almost Another Mine Horror at Ply-mouth...Burning of the Breaker at the Nottingham Mine...Fifty-five Men Be-low Kept in Egnorance of Their Danger ...The Fire Extinguished...Indignation Meeting of the Miners.

PLYMOUTH, Dec. 31, 1869.—There was nearly a repetition of the Avondale horror at this place yesterday. At about half-past ten A. M. the breaker of the Nottingham mine, situated at the southern end of the town, was discovered to be on fire. There were fifty-five men in the mine at the time, which is one of the man-traps, like the Avondale—one with but one outlet—yet, notwithstanding this, no notice was given to the men below that the building above was on-fire. Fortunately, it was discovered soon after it broke out, and with great exertion was not only prevented from spreading, but was extinguished, the men below remaining all the while in igno-

The fire was the result of gross carelessness on the part of the apany working it. It appears that two stoves were kept in the breaker to give heat to the boys employed there to pick out the slate from the coal as it goes in the breaker, and the pipes from these stoves were run directly through the woodstoves were run directly through the woodvork of the building, without any protection The result was what any sane man migh have expected. The woodwork heated until it became of the consistency of tinder and then ignited. At noon some of the men came up to din ner, and, although every exertion was made to keep the fire from their knowledge, the fact leaked out and they became aware for the first time of the terrible fate they had escaped When they went down again they informed the rest of the men in the mine, and they at once got together and held an indignation meeting and resolved at once to go up out of the mine. When they got up they assembled the rest of the men belonging to the mine—in all about seventy-five—and held another meeting, resolving that they would not again go down into the mine until there was built two brick chimneys for the stove pipes, a watch-man placed in the building night and day, and a bell at the bottom of the shaft so that they should have a signal when there was danger at the surface. Since that time the mine has not been worked, and the men still remain

The proprietors, Messrs, Thomas Brodrick & Co., not being able to get any men to supply the places of their old hands, have yielded to their demands so far as the two chimneys are concerned, and their construction has commenced; but they think one watchman in the night is sufficient, and decline to place one there in the day time. The men say that this only shows a willingness to protect their own property, and as their lives are exposed in the day time they say they shall insist on the two watchmen and also on the alarm bell.

THE COMING JOHN.

Chinese Immigrants at Omaha. [From the Omaha Herald, Dec. 28th.] The great question of cheap labor is about to be solved, and the cotton fields of the South to be supplied. Yesterday the advance guard of the thousands who are to come from the over-populated countries of Eastern Asia arrived on the emigrant train, eight days from San Francisco. The train consisted of twelve emigrant cars, with the necessary box cars containing the commissary stores for the trip.
Among the passengers were two hundred and seventy-five "Johnnies," mostly young men, looking healthy, and seemingly in good spirits, all flourishing the inevitable "pig-tail." One of them, who could talk a little English, said they were going to "Taxy."

Along the road many of them were enjoying themselves by gambling with dominoes, the stakes being the small "cash" coin, with the requisite square hole in the centre. At Fremont they stopped an hour, and cooked their dinners by the side of the train, and which consisted of rice with small pieces of which consisted of rice with small pieces of pork and fish. Mats form a great part of their bedding, which, with their general ap-pearance, were as cleanly as any like number of white laborers, while their conduct was much better. An amusing incident occurred at Schuyler, where a section man, under the influence of his Christmas spree, snatched off the hat of one of his Celestial railroad friends, and ran away with it, pursued by two of the Johnnies, who soon settled the matter, recovering the hat, and leaving the Hibernian hors du combat in the snow, and from the vigor displayed by the Chinamen he suffered an unpleasant sensation in the rear.

We trust that the parties who have con-tracted with these men will, by kind treatment, and fulfilling their part in good faith, prove the advantages which are claimed for this new class of labor for the South.

AN ARTFUL DECEIVER. Young Man from Philadelphia Re-lieves a Weaithy Family in Pittsburgh of Valuable Jewels---Part of the Stolen Property Recovered.
The Pittsburgh Commercial says:
About four weeks ago, a young man giving his name as H. W. Klett, came to this city from Philadelphia, and soon after his arrival made the acquaintance of a wealthy family in Allegheny City. His relations with the family, and especially with one of the daughters, were of the most intimate nature. Various articles of jewelry were loaned him, among which an elegant gold watch and chainbelonging to the young lady, and worth about three hundred dollars. Other members of the family also loaned him jewelry, until he had in his possession over four hundred dollars. He suddenly decamped with these treasures, and although search was immediately instituted he could not be found. Chief of Police Hagne was intrusted with the case, learning that Klett had turned up in Philadelphia, started-officer-Strain to that place to arrest him. The head of the family in which the him. The head of the family in which the him. The head of the family in which the depredations of Klett were committed accompanied the officer to Philadelphia, where they found Klett in the clutches of the law, having been apprehended on a variety of charges. The officer endeavored to get possession of the accused, but the authorities refused to turn him over until they were through with him. The watch and chain and several articles of stolen jewelry were found in the possession of the prisoner and secured. Referring to the balance of the jewelry, Klett stated that he had sold it to F. Kremer, jewel er, Penn street, this city. The officer called on Mr. Kremer and ascertained that the lewelry had been purchased and melted. The prisoner will likely be brought here as soon as the Philadelphia authorities get through with him.

Salnave made his escape from the city and took refuge in Fort Nationel, commonly called Fort Alexandre, which is situated on one of the highest points overlooking the city on the northwest side. Salnave is in imminent, peril, but it is expected that the foreign consuls will interpose for his protection and ultimate safety.

The entire population of the city are re-loiced at the turn affairs have taken. Saget and his staff had left St. Maro for Port au Prince, and had been heard from at Arcabie.

FACTS AND FANCIES. A Sad Tale of True Love and Dire Retri-

'In Herkimer county There never was seen,
A sweeter young creature
Than Annabel Green.
She was fair as the lilies And pure as the snow, And Ichabod Brown

Was sweet Annabel's beau. Fair Annabel Green Thus to Ichabod spoke, "Should you ever prove false My poor heart would be broke." Then he answered, "I hope To be roasted and eat

If my Annabel's love I shall ever forget." But Ichabod Brown
Proved faithless, and soon
Poor Annabel Green Was deserted and lone;
Then she wept and she mourned.
And she sobbed and she sighed. Till her tender heart broke And she laid down and died.

Then Ichabod Brown Was never at ease; He roamed all the way To the far Southern seas. And on going ashore Some savages met him, They built up a fire And roasted and eat him.
