One," which the publishers, Messrs. Hurd & Boughton, now issue in a very tasteful volume embellished with a frontispice by Darley. The author's synopsis of his hero's life runs thus: "A little gentleman—a burglar's boy—a Randall's Island boy—then on a Kentucky knorsery—champion rider in the circus—and ast a gentleman"—who distinguishes himself into the sacred presence. It was after in the Northern army. The title of the story is derived from the known physiological fact that an accident to the brain may obliterate the recollection of previous events, and thus cut off the past portion of a life from that which follows the wound. The author's sindered that he had been treated with anthorities for this fact, on which the originalty of his plot so greatly depends, are to be found on pages 58-40, and are not the least interesting paits of the book. The story is very well written, and has far more invention men rushed.northward to extinguish the fires. They came back looking rather, sheepish, though their remarks on the subject were by no means laimb-like.

The Commercial has been "interviewing" a number of prominent business men concerning the financial situation. Most of them seem to agree that the stringency in the money market has been greater in Wilmington than else streets, and our stringent usury laws. As money cannot be legally invested here at a ligher rate of interest, than 6 per cent., it naturally flows towards localities where a higher rate of interest than 6 per cent., it naturally flows towards localities where a higher rate of conders factory was blown down, and a cigar store adjoining was partially demolished.

A determined effort will be made
