There being no other cases ready, the Court [From The Independent.] Standing on the threshold of the new year, with ten months of the administration of President Grant before the country and the world, it is a fitting time to consider the present condition of affairs, and to contrast it with March last, when he took the solemn oath that invested him with the power conferred on him by the popular vote.

Leonomy.—In every branch of the public service his orders initiated retrenchments, which have been and are being carried out with zeal and fidelity. Useless offices have been discontinued; the clerical force in the departments has been largely decreased; the oeen discontinued; the clerical force in the departments has been largely decreased; the army was promptly reduced; very many of the surplus military officers, resulting from the reorganization of the regiments, have been ordered into service as Indian agents, thus saving the salaries of an equal number of civilians; and unnecessary appropriations have not been used. ins; and unnecessary appropriations | QUARTER DESSIONS—Judge Parson.—In the have not been used.

Honest Collections.—With taxation diminished from last year, the revenue has steadily increased, abating the discontent which always exists when the honest taxpayer is compelled to bear his own burden, and the burden that should fall on the dishonest taxpayer besides.

Mings.—With this increased efficiency and visibness on the payt of the revenue officers.
