The dase of this coal-fields—one of sixty miles and the other over thirty miles in length—where every valley required a new railroad, and where the increase of tonnage incident to the opening of the new laterals has been so great as to require at times an annual expenditure for additional rolling stock of over a million of dollars, it was necessary to resort to either of the following plans in order to accomplish the desired result?

First—To charge such high rates for tolls and transportation as would have enabled the Company to earn money enough, after payments of cash dividends, to supply the funds required for improvements.

Second—To increase the debt of the Company by loans made to finish the new work; or, Third.—To increase the capital stock, either by stock dividends paid in lieu of earnings diverted to improvements, or by receiving additional subscriptions to stock, issued to turnish the necessary funds for new construction.
