OBITUARY.

Duke de Broglie.

Duke de Broglie. Yesterday, the Duke de Broglie, one of the oldest statemen in Europe, died at the ad-vanced age, of eighty-five. He was born in 1785, and at the age of nine lost his father, who had refused to emigrate and died on the guillotine. He served in diplomatic and ad-ministrative capacities under Napoleon I., who remarked his intelligence and industry. Never attached to Napoleon, he regarded the Resto-ration with satisfaction, and Louis XVIII named him a peer of France. He attained the right to take part in the de-tates a few days before the judgment on Marshal Ney. The Duke de Broglie spoke many times during the trial in favor of the ac-cused, but in vain; he was sentenced to death, and on the morning of December 7, 1815, he breathe. breathe. A jury was empanelled at 2 o'clock P. M., and examined a number of witnesses, most of whom belonged to the hotel. When Mr. Van Buskirk and the clerk first entered the room, they found him lying on him back and the pis-tol lying on his left side. He was but partially dressed, having only his pants, boots and shirt on. A girl belonging to the house, who was occupied in a room three or four doors from that in which the sad event occurred, heard the report of the pistol, but did not attach any importance to it, not knowing precisely what and on the morning of December 7, 1815, he was shot. The Duke showed the same independent spirit in the legislative proceedings previous to the Revolution of 18:0, and served in various ministerial capacities under Louis Philippe. In 1834, when Gen. Jackson pressed the American claims on France he retired from the Ministry on the rejection of the indemnity bill, but was recalled by the King the month after, and with the title of President of Council. In 1830, he retired from office, and withstood every solici-tation to accept it again. After the election of Louis Napoleon, he entered the Legislative Assembly to promote monarchical views, but the coup defat disappointed his calculations. In 1856 he was admitted into the French Academy, and next appeared before the pubin various ministerial capacities under Louis importance to it, not knowing precisely what it was. A post mortem examination was made by Drs. Smith and Alba, and the ball mate by Dis. Smith and Aloa, and the ball was found to have entered the skull above the left eye, passing through the brain in a down-ward direction, and stopping against the cerebellum. Dr. Alba testified that death must have resulted from the wound thus inflicted inflicted. Academy, and next appeared before the pro-ble in 1801, when he entered a prosecution against the Prefect of Police for the illegal seizure of a work on which he had been occupied. His history since then is, doubless, for the most part social, and must be related by those who knew the old Duke more familiarly are of until the arrival of the parents. Among his effects was found a letter ad-dressed to his mother, and dated January 21st, but as Mr. Van Buskirk declined to have the letter published, we can only give a synopsis of the contents. It began by stating that he intended to commt suicide that day. The letter is of a rambling character, and does not display any particular emotion. He urges his brother not to follow in his foot-naths—not to spend as much money as he bad. ths-not to spend as much money as he had, and not to associate with company that had more money than he had himself. He sends his love to a number of friends, and requests his mother to tell them that he will never visit hem again. He says there is no use of his living any longer, as he was only a plague and a sorrow to his friends. He requests that he be buried in a plain board coffin, and that none but relatives attend the funeral. The motives that led to the commission of the rash act have not been fully learned as yet, but it is thought the young man had been living very fast for some time previous to his death, and having left home under not the most agreeable circumstances, had become embarrassed for financial resources. From his letter it would seem that he felt very much ashamed of his past conduct, and resorted to the very unsatisfactory remedy of suicide. the very unsatisfactory remeay of suicide. He is a young man, aged probably 17, and since his arrival here had mingled consider-ably in the society of the Jewish people, and seemed to be in good spirits most of the time. His body was placed in a coffin and left in the varies of the botal to await the arrival of his parlor of the hotel to await the arrival of his friends.

sional intervals of rest, up to the time of his death. Whether the story of his career and position in France is true or false, it is un-tioubtedly true that his wife occupies a place near the person of the Empress; and it was the receipt of a letter from her that hastened the end of his existence. The Roman correspondent of the Pall Mall Gozette, says :

The receipt of a letter from her that hastened the end of his existence. He has during his stay in Cairo received several letters from his wife, nearly all of them imploring him to return. He received a letter of this kind yesterday morning, and the reflection that he was a poor, penniless castaway, who perhaps would never be in a condition to rejoin his family, spurred him on to self-destruction. Yesterday morning he entered Mr. Kluge's

Yesterday morning he entered Mr. Kluge's Yesterday morning he entered Mr. Kluge's grocery, and asked the clerk to go to Mr. Feith's and buy him a coffin. He subse-quently met Mr. Feith, who had just shipped the body of General Herron to Villa Ridge, and assured him that he would soon have the job of., disposing of his body in like man-ner. During the day he told other parties that he "had too much trouble here; but would be happy to-night." His bearing, how-ever. gave no proof of his sincerity, so every ever, gave no proof of his sincerity, so every-body addressed by him paid no heed to what he said. Those who saw him, as we did this morning, stark and stiff in his pauper coffin, have evidence that he was fearfully earnest in all he said. all he said.

An inquest was held by Ceroner Corcoran over the body, during which most of the above facts were detailed by the witnesses. The ver-dict of the jury was, that the deceased had come to his death from poison administered by his own hands buring the day the friends of the deceased provided means to secure a good coffin and respectable interment of the body in the cemetery at Villa Ridge.

THE BUFFALO TRAGEDY.

The Murder of Dr. Andrew Mead, of Alle-gheny...Arrest and Reported Confes-sion of a Young Man.

and the successfulsearch after the watch of the unfortunate victim of this young murderer. He has at last succumbed to the fearful pressure of circumstantial evidence and confessed his guilt. This morning, in conversation with two or three visitors, he evinced more than usual in-terest in his condition, and anxiously inquired if there was any possibility of getting off without being hanged. When he was informed that that was a matter for a jury to determine what his intent was in committing the deed what his intent was in committing the deed, he appeared very despondent, and after a while apparently overcome by the weight of his own reflections, voluntarily delivered him-self of the following confession: "I am sorry I am in this position, but it is too late now. If they had not found the watch I should have been safe; but the evi-dence is too strong, and I suppose I shall be hung. When left Olean I had no intention of doing anything of the kind. As I passed Dr. Mead's office I saw the doctor, and made up up wind to get his money. I went in and sat down, asked the doctor to loan me S2 to go to Dunkirk; he declined to loan me any money, and I waited an opportunity and grabbed him with the intention of taking it was strong for me, and got me down. We had a severe scuffle, and the doctor got up and went and locked the door and locked me in. I though the was going to get too a gun to guard me, for the doctor keeps agun, and he is an awful tempered man when he gets mad. I seized a small shovel by the stove and hit him over the head two or three times, and the store key fell from his hand, and I don't know but I struck him once or twice after that. I then took his watch and money, unlocked the store door, went out, locked the door after me, and started for Olean." He stole a passage to Genesse, went from there to Hornellsville, and thence to Buffalo. Each moment seems to increase the realization of the terrible responsibility of his crime, and he was once or twice heard to his crime, and he was once or twice heard to say, "Now I have no hope of escaping the gallows, and I shall only strive to obtain forgiveness from God."

THE ROMAN COUNCIL. Highly Important Discussions-The Pope's Health--A Probable Defection.

ROME, Jan. 8.—The Fathers of the Council issembled this morning at nine o'clock, to assembled this morning at nine o'clock, to continue, in a private congregation, the ad-journed deltate on the schemata decretorum. After the celebration of mass, the President of the Cardinal-Legates announced that the Pope had appointed Cardinal Biz-zarri president of the deputation of regular orders. The debate was then resumed, but I have not yet learned the names of the sneakers, and at this moment regular orders. The debate was then resumed, but I have not yet learned the names of the speakers, and at this moment can only tell you there was another adjourn-ment, which carries the discussion forward till next Monday, approaching the middle of January. The Council has now sat a month without having passed a single decree, or set tide even one point of the multitudinous ques-tions to be brought under consideration, and thore is no sign of a termination to the present debate. There are still many bishops to speak, and up to the sitting of to-day none of the ora-tors have been limited to time; but it is now proposed to make a standing order on this point, as otherwise the debate may be pro-tracted for months. The subject was men-tioned yesterday in the Commission ou Dogma at its first meeting at the Vatican, under the opposition evinced in the Council to the projects of decrees, particularly as re-gards the complaints of Monsignor Stross-meyer and Monsignor Genouilhac; and several members expressed a willingness to consider the objections and alter the form of the decree. Other members remarked that the Opnosition while hond in novers hed the decree. Other members remarked that the Opposition, while loud in protests, had not proposed an amendment. To this it was replied that the committee should take advantage of this omission, and itself bring forward an amendment; but the question was left undecided.

left undecided. The chiefs of the Opposition were instantly informed of the distribution of the memoran-dum on Infallibility, mentioned in my letter of yesterday, and, before the day expired, they sent round a memorandum opposing the dogma. But this document, though ably drawn up, is unsigned, while that of the Infallibilits bears forty signatures, which gives it a great advantage, and the circulation of the anonymous memorandum is regarded by the nublic as a false step. There is an absurd of the anonymous memorandum is regarded by the public as a false step. There is an absurd rumor here that the Opposition has cast its eye on Monsignor Dupanloup as the succes-sor to Pius IX., in case of the Pope's death-during the sitting of the Council. Monsignor Dupanloup, in the first place, is ineligible for the Papal Chair, not being a Cardinal; and, in the next, he has never been thought of for it. At the same time, the Pope shows no sign of dying, being in better health than he has enjoyed for some years, though he has host his of dying, being in better health than he has enjoyed for some years, though he has lost his vivacity, and become very reserved, in which point, indeed, he resembles Monsignor Du-panloup, who now hardly opens his lips. There are even whispers that the Bishop is going the way of Father Hyacinthe. Cardinal Mathieu is on the eve of returning here. He went to France, as I informed you at the time, on the business of his diocese, and, though very discontented did not ahandop his though very discontented, did not abandon his duties in the Council. Several Austrian and Hungarian Bishops have asked the Pope for a similar leave of absence; and as the Holy Father believes their presence in the Reichs rath will be serviceable to the Church, thei equest has been granted. It is now admitted hat the Council will not conclude its sittings during the present year. The Empress of Austria has visited the

American Converts to Bomanism An Italian correspondent sends to the New York Post the following :

We have just had the denouement of what did promise to be quite a little romance. Those Americans who passed last whater at Nice may remember the excitement caused by Nice may remember the excitement caused by the mysterions disappearance of a Mrs. Hill, who was supposed to have drowned herself or to have eloped. The Var was dragged for her body, and a runaway couple of sus-picious manners, was pursued to a Genocse Hotel; but all searches proved vain until within a few weeks; when the husband learned that the lost one was safe and sound in a liceman convent. So be came on, had an in a Roman convent. So he came on, had an interview with the Secretary of State, and interview with the Secretary of State, and demanded her surrender. Antonelli said, "I Certainly, if she chooses to go with you;" and gave bim an order to that efficit. Mr. Hill went, and saw and did not conquer, as the lady declined to go home, alleging that she was not happy with him, and was happy where she was; he cried out that it was a Matara case, and threatened the English fleet, & c. Set and Antonelli simply replied. Mattra case, and chreatened the Lughsh neet, &c., &c.; but Antonelli simply replied: "Non Possamus; your wife is of age, and we cannot do violence to her inclinations." All the poor man could learn was the manner of her flight. She had, suffered some family attliction, got religious, hired a fishing-boat, and coasted down to Civita Vecchia. At Rome she was cordially received, of course, and so the tale has come to a prosaic ending. "Two New York ladies, Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Ward Burnett, imitated Mrs. Hill's ex-ample last week, at least so far as to become Catholics; but neither of them has expressed any desire to renounce the world, the flesh and the devil to the extent of conventual se lusion.

ENGLISH FOX-HUNTING.

An Opinion from Mr. Ruskin.

An Opinion from Arr. EUSETE. The following letter from Mr. Ruskin appears in the London Telegraph: As, thirty years ago, I publicly expressed a strong opinion on the subject of field sports. and as, with more accurate knowledge, I ho'd the same opinion still and more strongly, wil you permit us to place the controversy be-tween your correspondents, in which I have no time to take part, on somewhat clearer no time to take part, on somewhat clearer grounds. Reprobation of fox-hunting on the ground of cruelty to the fox is entirely futile. More, pain is caused to the draught-horses of Lon-don in an hour, by avariciously overloading them, than to all the foxes in England by the

and heart in human death, caused by neglect, in our country cottages, in any one winter, could not be equalled by the death-pangs of any quantity of foxes. The real evils of fox-hunting are that it wastes the time, misapplies the energy, ex-hausts the wealth, narrows the capacity, de-bases the taste, and abates the honor, of the upper classes of this country; and instead of weening, as one of your correspondence supkeeping, as one of your correspondents supposes, "thousands from the workhouse," it poses, "thousands from the workhouse, is sends thousands of the poor both there, and

The athletic training given by fox-hunting is excellent; and such training is vitally necessary to the upper classes. But it ought always to be in real service to their country; in personal agricultural labor at the head of their tenartry; and in extending English life their tenantry; and in extending English life and dominion in waste regions, against the adverse powers of nature. SINGULAR SUICIDE IN CAIRO.

A Reputed French Conut and Captain Takes Strychnine. [From the Cairo, II:, Bulletin, Jan. 21.] Dr. A. Carre, more generally known as the "French Doctor," visited the City Brewary yesterday afternoon, shortly after 5 o'clock, and seture the bestendars to drink with bin and asking the bost short of after 5 octock, called for a glass of beer. Before drinking it he drew a small vial from his pocket, and taking a small quantity of the contents upon the blade of his knife, sifted into the beer, and, with the remove that it may formulate the orade of his knife, sifted into the beer, and, with the remark that it was "strychnine-good for the stomach-excellent for those who in-tend to go to Villa Ridge," emptied the glass. As it had been his custom to take medicines in this way, his conduct excited little or no attention. He insisted, however, that he had taken strychnine and would "tinish" at six o'clock. He then passed out on the platform in front of the brewery; sat down, and soon in ront of the brewery; sat down, and soon tunbled over in a terrible convulsion. True to his prediction that he would "finish" at six o'clock, he died while many of the time-pleces of the city were proclaiming that hour. Dr. Carre was not a regular physician, but those who were acquainted with him say that he had been well educated, was known in France as Count Veitte, and filled the position of captain in the French army. He fied his native country to escape the consequences of

PARAGUAY.

Hopes of Cutting Off Lopez -- Dom Pedro's Determination to Pash the Campaign---Sufferings of the Paraguayans. Rio DE JANEIRO, Jan. 5.—The latest despatches from the Paraguayan territory indi-cate that the Argentine Ministry, at least, consider the war over. Varela, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Confederation, has made an expedition to the army, and, in view of the "situation," has con-cluded an arrangement with the Brazilian Minister for a general reduction and withdrawal of the troops, the Commander-in-Chief, Count. d'Eu, having expressed the opinion that withdrawal will not embar-rass his plans for the further pursuit of Lopez in the mountains. The National Guerd of the Argentine Confederation is now being landed at Buenos Ayres. The nominal support which Hurneys has given to the new backless here Uruguay has given to the war has also been withdrawn, leaving the Brazilians with a small remnant of the Argentine army to complete the work which yet remains for them General Piedra, is in sharp pursuit of them General Piedra, is in sharp pursuit of the despot, who is known to be retreating toward. Quidaba by Pauadaro, whence he can cross into Bolivia by the Rio Apa. He will be cut of if the flowling column of Generation off if the flanking column of Gen. Camara can be supplied with provisions. But this is the great difficulty. Even Lopez is in extreme need. One exper day is all he can give as rations for each 200 men, and to eke out a subsistence. substance they have to forage for bitter oranges, which is all they can gather in that region. Count d'Eu, owing to the fall of the river, has returned with his main army to Roseviro the large steamers here much here of the river, has returned with his main army to Rosario, the large steamers being unable to ascend the river to a point above this place, and the smaller boats are of insufficient capacity to supply the whole force. The Count, however, reflecting the views of the Emperor, will vigorously push the new campaign, until the last remnant of Lopez's force has been dispersed, and the tyrant himself either captured, killed, or driven into exile. This is an unpopular de-termination. The Brazilians consider the war over, and want the expenditure to cease, and although over £40,000,000 have aiready been sunk, the Emperor considers it highly been sunk, the Emperor considers it highly dishonorable and unsafe for Brazil to rest until ample security is gained for Brizit to fest until ample security is gained for the future by the annihilation of Lopez's power. The sufferings of the Paraguayan people are represented to be terrible. An eye-witness, recently returned, says that starvation and absolute nakedness are far from being the exception. At night the plazas and squares and sidewalks of the streets are the dormitories where hundreds of the unfortunates lie down to rest.—Tribune,

-Garibaldi, in a recent letter, says: "I know not which is the greater, the insolence of him who treads, or the endurance of him who is trodden under foot. -The Mail of Montgomery, Ala., asks whether "the national debt. stained with "the national debt, stained fratricidal gore, shall be repudiated and hid-den forever from sight, or be funded and so become a monument of the shame and ruin of the people?" The monument will probably be erected.

INFALLIBILITY.

A Common Sense View. The Cincinnati Gazette thus treats the ques-tion of infallibility:

If the Council votes the Pope infallible, does the Council confer the infallibility on him or simply recognize that which already exists If the Council confers infallibility on the Pope, does the Council thereby cease to be infalli-ble? Does all the infallibility of the Church thenceforth become concentrated in the Pope? How did the General Council become infallible? If from God, how can it transfer to one man this gift which God conferred on the whole Church? If the action of the Council be simply to recognize the infallibility of the Pope as previously existing, then the Pope, being already the infallible power, is the only power that can declare himself infallible. be be unfallible let him so proclaim himself. If he be not infallible, no Council can make him so.

Lord Macaniay's Queer Freaks....A Fur-ther Statement.

To the Editor of the Evening Bulletin-The curious story of the Historian, Lord Maccaulay," which you published in your issue of vesterday, on the authority of the London Daily Telegraph may be "extravagant," but it s by no means new. The fact of the great historian smashing glassware at the dinner table, not only of the Star and Garter Coffeeroom, but in the restaurants of London, is a thrice told tale. I have seen it stated at least a dozen times in as many years; and during a recent visit to England I met and conversed with persons who had been witnesses to this Macaulayan freak. Generally, however, this after-dinner exploit is said to have been acafter-dinner exploit is said to have been ac-companied, or instantly followed, by another no less extraordinary. Macaulay, after smash-ing the glass (which, by the way, he as often did in the middle of his dinner as at its proper close) would rise from the table, seize his umbrella, (which he invaribly carried instead of a cane,) whirl it wildly three or four times above his head, then ask for and pay his bill (glass included), and stalk forth utterly ob-livious to the astonished stare from all sides of which he was the focus. The people heof which he was the focus. The people be-lieved that the great historian was laboring under the sudden attack of some tremendous thought. This was probably correct. At any rate it saved the eccentric Lord from being considered crazy. PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27, 1870. GRAYBEARD.

STREET SONGS IN PARIS.

Immense Sales of Song Books.

Immense Sales of Song Books. An English paper says: "No less than 27,000 penny song-books are sold every day throughout France. What is still more surprising is the immense number of persons engaged in the trade. It is the cus-tom for a man⁵or a family of beggars to pro-cure the song-books and tramp the whole country round, singing the songs in them. This attracts attention, and then they sell the little books. The singers in France number about 800,000. They may be divided into three great orders : those at fixed posts, the tramps who wander about and sing in the streets, and those who frequent the low eat-ing-houses. The song-book which has sold the most is one containing the Femme à barbe which Theresa made notorious. This song, however, is of German origin."
