Wednesday, February 2, 1870. THE LONE SENATOR.

The difference between manly independence and unmanly obstinacy is a very broad one and yet the two qualities are frequently mis eken for each other. And this mistake may arise either from imperfect knowledge of the character, of the individual or from the fact that the actions of men so frequently arise from a mixture of motives in which the good and bad are unevenly blended. Benator Lowry, like every other public ser-fant, is open to the fullest and freest criticism or all his public acts. He is a man of some ability, and has had long experience in the legstation of Pennsylvania. Coming from a disant part of the State, the share that he has in that sort of local legislation which has brought so many of his legislative colleagues under criticism in this art of the State is comparatively unknown des. Instrow he is prominently before the public as the solitary Senator who helped argely to defeat the wishes of the people of actions as part of the news of the day. If it Philadelphia last winter, in the matter of the Metropolitan Police bill, and who has done his best, though vainly, to defeat the same.

measure again. Senator Lowry, in a long letter, to a colored friend in this city, attacks the bill with a great deal of bitterness and no little egotism. His professed objections ramble over a variety of before his fellows with all his shameful wickeddetails, but we presume the cardinal point ness made manifest, and himself made the obmade is contained in this following paragraph, ject of common scorn and reproach, is the s remarkable for the jumble of its rhetoricas surest preventive of crime that can be devised it is for the superficiality of its logic: by human ingenuity. When vice is dragged "The bill which you ask me to vote for is at

It is in the teeth of of its devotees is displayed before the world, the doctrine of squatter sovereignty—a princi-ple which your race, above all others, cannot fford to surrender. It is too soon for my colored brethren in Philadelphia to give away, however remote, the right of the election of their own officers. I have fought, as it were, 'beasts at Ephesus,' to give you this Take it and taste it, and you will keep strike with your own ballot and hew Mayor Lord, and you will do it easily, if they are half vile as you say they are. When Senator Lowry brings forward argu-

and the preservation of society from impurity and vice. Whenever a grievous offence is committed, the newspapers speak bold words of rement and appeal like this, it becomes eminently buke to the sinner, and of denunciation of his proper that the people should look closely to cr.me. When, for instance, Mr. Beechergave his see whether this is the real ground for his obsanction to the crimes of Richardson, and, by his stinate opposition to a measure in which he complicity might have led many weak brothers and his immediate constituents certainly have and sisters into belief that sham divorces and very little direct interest. A Metropolitan free love are in accordance with Divine law, the Police, according to Mr. Lowry, is opposed to public press strove earnestly and with sincerity the grand doctrine of "squatter sovereignty," fluence of his example. When that other Lowry is deeply concerned lest his "colored Beecher poured out through the channels of our Government stands,"—or squats. Perhaps Mr. Beecher's violence Mr. Lowry's colored brethren lose their right last night was the result rather of a consciouspolice force to manage our elections. How to elect their own officers by the passage of the Metropolitan Police bill is not made apparent. At present the police of Philadelphia, as tion, than of a sincere belief in everybody but Mr. Lowry is aware, are appointed by an officer called Mayor, usually elected by the people. Mayor Fox is, theoretically at least, elected by the people, and is assisted by a volunteer Board of Commissioners, consisting of Alderman McMullin, Lewis C. Cassidy, Esq., and several other patriotic citizens, who serve without regular salarespects, he was not fitted, from the peculiar HENRY PHILLIPPI, ries. These Commissioners are not elected by the people, and the sacred doctrine of squatter position of himself and his family, to pass judgment upon a press that had dared to convict sovereignty is not recognized in their him of a gross assault upon public moaction. He then read an eutorial from the Gazette of the 21st, upon the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment, and another from the Commercial of same date, to show the truth of his statement. He then plunged boldly into the argument and took up the proposition of General Breckinridge in de-proposition of General Breckinriage in de-fence of his original position on the subject of the right of eminent domain. He spoke at some length, and read from numerous autho-itian in regard to the constitutionality of some length, and read from numerous authorities in regard to the constitutionality of the Ferguson bill and the consequent nullity of the proposed bonds. He reiterated his former arguments. His argument was mainly from a legal standpoint, and compared favorably with his first, though unconvincing to the friends of the read. At the conclusion of Mr. Caldwell's speech, which was loudly applauded by the Louisville delegates, Gen. Breckinridge made a few remarks, which closed the discussion before the Committee. The measure will very likely now be intro-duced before the Legislature proper, and the fight will continue with unabated ardor. There is no doubt it will meet with the favor of both Houses and be passed through. Its op-ponents will demand, and probably obtain, some modifications.
