PHILADELPHIA Whata Woman thinks of the Situation, The London Times publishes a letter from Madrid, the writer of which thus refers to the Duke of Genoa's candidatre and the Ministerial changes: "We read with great delight in the Times the epigrammatic and contomptuous replyto the charge that was brought against that journal, that the communication from the Marquis Rapallo, 'era cuestion de Bibros', was, an affair of, pounds. Nothing could be more stinging; but the skins' of Spanish writers are too thick to feel anything so delicate and disdainiul. Montemar's visit to Harrow was so private that many, here of those supposed to be in Ministerial circles and secrets knew nothing about it. We have just passed through a small crisis; the result, of course, you knew as soon almost as outselves. The Ministers who leave do so on the ground of having supported the Duke of Genoa having definitively refused, he gould not consistently remain in office. So said Martos, Becerra, and Sagasta, on which Prim started on his feet; seemingly in a storng of passion, saying 'if you are all going on account of Genoa, I shall go too.' He deals with his colleagues as a clever lady of my acquaditation contress to small buring in the evening she rings for bed-candles, gives a knowing nod to her way towards, their sleeping apartments, and the children, of course, to this muster, when the darlings are by this stratagem disposed of the grown-up; people go back to the drawing-room, and whist reigns undisturbed. In the same manner Prim, when anxious to rid himself of his companions, invariently has so in resignation en mass. However, he has no such intention; and for all that he is a great hindrance to all movement, he is better than no one. It was this morning visiting some Montpensierisk; when Verand the properties of the substitution of the batter than no one. A feminine lobbyist magnificent in figure and dress of volvet and ermine. Her face is familiar in the halls, and on the east side of the Senate, which she prefers to the notorious reception parlor, the dread of all informed Washington people. This woman is the finest looking of all that haunt the place. Round, tall figure, good features, rather find for pleasing, creamy complexion, dark, crisped hair, and eyes with a commanding stare are very attractive, added the art of toilet which never slower her was sent last year by the M—Coal and Iron Company to obtain their large claim for coal furnished the Government during the war. These women deserve to be paid freely for their unscrupulous operations, for they are the most indefatigable lobbyists.
