a total solar eclipse, the Astronomer Royal proceeded to calculate the exact path of shadow for the various eclipses which must have occurred in the vicinity of the probable date. That of October 22d, 546 B. C., proved unapplicable; so also did that of June of May 19th, B. C. 556, Mr. Airy found that its central shadow must have at least passed near the site in question.

Just then were completed Prof. Hansen's elaborate Lunar Tables, and also those required to compute the smr applicable; and moreover, the same eminent mathematican, at Mr. Airy's request, computed the smn and moon for this and other celipses yet to be noticed. It was then found that on the receipses yet to be noticed. It was then found that on the 19th of May. B.
