EVENING BULLETIN. Wednesday, March 16, 1870. AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION. The new organization in which the EVEN-ING BULLETIN has united with the Day, Post, Star, Herald, and the Sunday papers of Philadelphia, and with a number of influential journals in Boston, New York, Newark, Baltimore and other places, is lengthening its cords and strengthening its stakes in the most satisfactory manner. The old monopoly of the Associated Press not only served us very imperfectly, but charged us very exorbitant rates for what news it did supply; and our readers must be abundantly satisfied that we have served them well

by cutting loose from the fossilized Associated Press and supplying them with the greatlyincreased variety of news from all parts of the Those who have not money, or have not friends world with which our telegraphic columns are now daily crowded. The American Press Association is, as yet, in its infancy, but it is extending its operations. with great energy, and, as a natural result, is rapidly attracting the notice and securing the support of the press throughout the country. Especially at the West and Southwest are its zation. On the one hand, the master should advantages appreciated, and we have almost daily notice of fresh additions to the list of its patrons. Among the latest of these are the other, the master should be secured against a Louisville Courier-Journal; the Memphis violation of the agreement by the apprentice Spring Overcoats, $5 00. what the "general principles" are that govern the present Legislature, it would not be very hard to define; but Mr. Davis probably does not refer to these. He wishes to convey the idea that it is a "general principle" that all bills must be reported favorably from committee, in order to secure for them a discussion in the House. We believe there are three methods of dealing with bills in committee. They may be reported favorably; they may be reported negatively; and, by certain usage, they may never be reported at all. In the case of the Border Raid bill, Mr. Davis thought proper [1] to report it favorably on "general principles." extan But why did he not report it negatively, on the same "general principles," and so put the opposition which he now says he has always entertained toward this swindle, on the record mhl ly rp$ Ninth and I from the start?

This is the Chester, Easton and Reading. This is the first time they have met in the coal region. The Church, after years of struggle and labor, has reached a position of influence, and is a power in the community. The venerable Henry Boehm (the patriarch of Methodism), now in his ninety-fifth year, about sixty years ago preached at Potts' Iron Works, now in the borough of Pottsville. There was then but one or two Methodists in the place. In 1829 Rev. William Hunter Ball was sent to this place, as a mission with a memberplace. In 1829 Rev.
