Under this symbol the idea is conveyed that together the husband and wife must drink the cup of conjugal life to the dregs—whether it be filled with ambrosia or with gall. Japanese mothers have greater authority over their children than their fathers, and the rights of women are so far recognized in the country that a woman has wielded the sceptre of the Mikados. But to return to the home life. The law of the country insists that each child shall be daily exposed to the air without clothes and with its head shaved and in spite of both rain and sun. During infancy the child's ordinary playmates are a fit, shortlegged dog, and fatter tailless cat. Instruction is never forced upon either parents or children; it is supposed to recommend itself naturally, by its own intrinsic merits; and every man and woman throughout the empire is able to read, write and cipher. The thirtieth day after birth every citizen receives his first name; on attaining his majority he takes a second, a third on his marriage, a fourth on being invested with any public function, which he changes upon attaining each higher grade, and so on to the name given to him after his death. The last is engraved on his tomb, and he is by it known to all succeeding generations.

THE ONEIDA DISASTER. What an English Journal Thinks. The Pall Mall Gazette has the followin mment upon the Oneida disaster. Its i rmation at the time of writing, of course as very incomplete:
The papers, yesterday, printed a telegram
rom New York which must have troubled every one who read it;

"Full particulars have arrived at San Francisco of the loss of the United States corvette Oneida, through a collision with the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Bombay. The latter vessel never stopped after the collision, though the Oncida's guns were instantly fired Great indignation is manifested against the Captain of the Bombay. The Oncida's boat saved fifty-six of the crew. One hundred and twenty perished."

Unfortunately, this is precisely the sort of story to be told in the furthermost corner of the Union within twenty-four hours of its first utterance, and to be believed wherever it is repeated. (Consti repeated. "Great indignation is manifested," no doubt; and supposing the accusation to be true, any degree of indignation against the captain of the Bombay would be justified. But is it true? or our own part we do not, cannot believe it; we cannot believe that he pursued his course knowing that, whether or not by his own default, a whole ship's crew needed his instant help. But that the story will find ready acceptance in America we have too much reason to fear; and that is not only a mischief in itself, but indicative of a state of celing too deplorable and too dangerous to HEAVY FORGERIES IN NEW YORK.
