"The difficulties in the way of applying chemical electricity for heating purposes being thoroughly understood by the inventor, he pro poses in this application of the invention to employ the magneto-electric machine, and the object of the experiments on Wednesday was to test the fitness of this machine for the purng tendered Dr. Burton every facility for mak ing these tests, the large magnet machine of duced, for with it twenty feet of No. 29 iron were rendered red-hot, and when it was short time the heat was equally developed i each, thereby proving conclusively the equal distribution of the current. Following this experiment, the circuit changer was connected with several of the heaters, and it was found to do its work thoroughly. The advantage of employing this method for warming the railroad cars must be obvious. By connecting motive power is obtained at scarcely any addi tional cost; and regarding the entire feasibility having a train thrown from the track, instead of being roasted alive with red-hot stoves, the passengers escaping the perils of being crushed by the wreck of the car stand some chance of escaping the horrible death by burning. Upon the whole, the experiments were entirely satisfactory, and demonstrated clearly the entire feasibility of employing electricity as a heating

questered vale of life than Jane Austen. Like Charlotte Bronté and George Eliot, she was the daughter of a country clergyman, but few clergymen's daughters now-a-days keep s closely to the home circle as the "dear Aun Jane," of whom her nephew, himself a clergyman, writes so beautifully in his old age. Genius, like a strong mountain stream, force life-she was born in 1775, and died in 1817was spent at the parsonage of Steventon, a rural village upon the chalk hills of North Hants, and there, before she was twenty-one years old, she wrote "Pride and Prejudice." Jane was an attractive girl, slight, elegant and handsome, but it seems she never had a love affair nor did any event occur in the family calculated to arouse strong feeling. Hers was a calm, peaceful course, and its serenity-some readers may call it monotony-is reflected in her novels. Only four of her tales were printed during her lifetime; the pecuniary recompense she received for them was so trifling that ably, says her biographer, never met with any one whose ability was equal to her own .--London Daily News.

The suspension has helped the market, and f a regular production could be had at the present prices and with the present demand, the trade would prosper all the year. The heavy stocks are worked down, rates have advanced and are firmer, and a moderate supply is going forward. Along the line of our roads brisk trade is doing in the larger sizes, the furnaces taking considerable quantities, and stove is holding its own among retailers. If an understanding could be had between the SUN BIERS, 6 21SUN SETS, 5 581 HIGH WATER, 3 5 operators, the men and the railroads, and a co-operative feeling induced, we have no doubt that a steady, profitable year's business would be the result. Now that the market is relieved of its heavy pressure, and a market is relieved of its heavy pressure, and a new start is made, a harmonious action by all concerned in the production and transporta-tion of coal, would ensure good wages, fair profits and reasonable prices. LEHIGH AND WYOMING. In the Lehigh region all the operations ex-cept those of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, at Summit Hill and Nesquehoning, and of the German Pennsylvania Coal Coal pany, at Tresckow, are at work under the old basis. The convention at Tamaqua, on the Th inst. for New York. Th inst., by a vote of four to one decided in faver of resumption, and therefore the mines were generally started. This convention very properly blamed the upper Luzerne districts for the failure of suspend from the Association those districts embracing the Penn-sylvania, Hyde Park, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and Delaware and Hudson Com-sylvania, Hyde Park, Delaware and Hudson Comand Western and Delaware and Hudson Com-panies for the space of two years, and, in ad-dition, passing a vote of censure against the men comprising those districts. The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company do not seem to be in any hurry to start their mines, and there is a strong probability that they will remain idle some time. The Wyoming and Lackawanna opera-tors are working, their tonnages being
