of good stuff, but I'm sure they are not salable—that is the point. They are done in an old-fashioned manner, I think, and you could no more sell them than a tailor could a coat of 1830, or a milliner a bonnet which might have been quite the rage in the last reign.

"It's not the merits of the thing I fall foul of,—though I should like to quarrel with a little fine priting—here and there,—but only the 'question of trade. It is not because a story is bad or an author a fool that either should not be popular nowadays, as you and I know, who may see donkeys crowned with laurels, while certain clever fellows of our acquaintance fight vainly for a maintenance or a reputation." I can't but the public, be hanged to them), and from my knowledge of the former, I should say you will never get a good sale for commodities like these.
