I From an Occasional Correspondent.] ROME. April 2.—To specify the many objects of interest that we have seen, and the places

First, with reference to the gardens of Sallust, now the grounds of the Villa Ludovisi; and. secondly, the gardens of Lucuilus, at present the small park on the Pincian Hill, and the gardens of the French Institute. As we have said, after passing the Forum we were pretty well in the country. Driving along towards the Gate of St. Paul, the coachman turned and asked us whether we would not like to see the old marble quarries which the Pope has lately found; for, be it known that the Pope does everything in Rome, as the Queen does everything in England. Assenting to the alighted at a large enclosure on the bank of the Tiber, where are brought the marbles intended for the buildings now in course of erection in the city. This spot is conveniently situated for the purpose to which it is devoted, being above close inshore for boats to haul up to the land. thus avoiding the necessity of constructing piers and wharves, and being at the same time and egress to and from the city.

And here one observation. We have found that the rivers running through the European cities which we have visited are confined within

Where the men were digging could be seen ends, and sometimes whole pieces of marble, rom the water's edge to the top of the bank, for successive centuries; and all this treasure had been lost and forgotten until accident had Christian churches and palaces of materials laboriously gathered by the Emperors for Pagan temples, or monuments of their vices, follies or achievements. The position of this marble shows that the bed of the river, as well as the banks, has been rising continually. At high water the pits dug to get out the stone are flooded, and even at low water-mark it is evident that further treasures are still beneath the waves. The roads formerly constructed to remove the material from the river to the higher bank may still be seen, in some places reaching flown out of sight in the muddy water. Wine-jars of earthenware are uncovered in nooks and corners of driven away in haste, or else the articles were not considered worth carrying away. The men of old looked for places suited to their purpose with the same eye as the men of to-day, and it is named Monte Testaccio and is artificial; that when "Rome was great" all nations were tributary, and annually sent their tribute money to Rome in earthen pots: When the money had been removed, the vessels were carried out to a particular spot and broken, and the fragments all thrown in apile, which, in the course of ages, grew to be the hill before us. We accepted the statement as adequate, although the hill is colleged the first tribute before. The hill is colleged of fragments of carthen ware; and truly, figure of Rome's monuments are of cypress trees a little off from the road, and much to have seen it, but its discomforts are between them and us, a little in advance, a great until one gets used to them. The Camimportance.

We prefer asking the people, passers by, laborers or mule-drivers about different objects which meet the eye, before consulting Guide Books, as we find that a new interest is sometimes attached to the objects by their answers. About this hill: the driver told us that it is named Monte Testaccio and is artificial; that when "Rome was great" all nations were in many look which made us inquire what the present one, was erected on the spot. Her fortune, most probably, enabled him to purchase the bouse in which he lived and wrought. It still stands. It can hardly be called a princely mansion. It is entered to be the original one of St. Clement himself. The subterranean church was illuminated the day we were there, and proved to be interesting; but neither it nor the oratory commended to the house are all up stairs. The walls of the upper part of the house are all up stairs. The walls of the upper part of the house are of that kind of the present one, was erected on the spot. ublic, and that the time had arrived, and that he abomination would not stay the action of Horrible Tragedy in Baltimore. The entire city was greatly agitated last night by a report that five horrible murders had been perpetrated by a mother by cutting the throats of five of her children and of her own mother. The report proved true, the facts being as follows: About four o'clock this afternoon, Mrs. Catharine Marsh, who, with her four children, lived with her parents, Mr. BROWN STONE RESIDENCE and Mrs. Dwyer, at No. 99 Canal street, a few squares from Bellair market, committed the terrible butcheries, first killing her children and then assaulting her mother. Mrs. Dwyer, the mother of Mrs. Marsh, in her ante-mortem examination to-night, stated that about 4 P. M., herself and daughter, Catharine Marsh and three children of Catharine, being the only persons in the house at the time, Catharine asked her if she had ten cents, and ten cents, and then put on her bonnet and left the cents, and then put on her bonnet and left the house. She went a few doors and borrowed a butcher knife, and thence proceeded to District School, No. 1, and calling out her son James, aged eight years, cut his throat from ear to ear, nearly severing his head from his body. A little boy, named Burnett, came out of the school room with James, and witnessed the murder. Catharine then rushed at the boy Burnett, but he escaped her.

Thence she returned to her home and went the boy Burnett, but he escaped her.

Accomplic Liquors Pure.

The pungent aroma of the fusel oil and biting acids present in all of them can be scented as the glass is raised to the lips. The nauseous flavor of these active poisons is perceptible to the palate, and a burning senjation in the stomach attests their existence when the naxious draught has gone down. Paralysis, tillogy, int.

Medical science asks for a pure attimulant to use as a specific, which, while it diffuses itself through the system more rapidly than any other known agent, is supported by the property of the stimulant to diffuse. May be examined at 80 clock on the morning of sale. It is the property of the stimulant to diffuse. May be examined at 80 clock on the morning of sale.
