better and not give any more trouble to the whites. He desires now to make with them a good and lasting peace. Ossaka, chief of the band of Fried Grease, complained that while has always been friendly with the whites his band suffered more than the others from the whites, notwithstanding he was not ill-disposed towards them, and desired that a lasting friendship should be established again. The Berry Chief said it was his desire that the past should be forgotten, and that a good peace be made with the whites. He complained of the Peud Oriellas, and desired that the whites will exercise their influence to bring timen to make a lasting peace with the Piegans. Sloacyes, of the Lame Bull's band, says that his family has been nearly extinguished in the late fight, but he will not talk bad and desires to make peace. He fears that the North Blackfeet might steal again from the whites and that the blame might be put on the Piegans.

The White Calf, Generous Woman, Cut Heat and Big Talk, chiefs of different bands of prons, were also present and spoke, but theirs being a repetition of the preceding, I think that the above will be enough to persuade you of their general desire to make a lasting peace with the whites being a repetition of the preceding, I think that the above will be enough to persuade you of their general desire to make a lasting peace with the whites.

In this connection General Sully speaks of the conversation with Father Imoda, that no further serious difficulties need be apprehended from those Indians; that the small-pox had carried off large numbers of them, and mostly the younger portion of the tribe had died. for any further movement of troops this spring.

General Sully thinks it probable that if some proper person could be sent, clothed with full authority to act, much good would result, both to the Indians and the Government. They might be induced to give up their roving habits of life, stealing, &c., but the person sent to talk with these Indians should be one who with these Indians should be one who with the person sent to talk the United States Mails. with these Indians should be one who understands them fully, and not make promises which afterward will not be complied with. Commissioner Parker has official reports from Captain Keys, Agent of the Indians at Ounarrow Agency, New Mexico, the Utes and Sicarilla Apaches.
