THE RICHMOND CALAMITY.

In the history of Richmond, Virginia, there have been a good many terrible events. But none have been more calculated to excite popular emotion and sympathy than the appalling one of yesterday morning. In the number and the social rank of the victims, we find this calamity resembling the frightful one of 1811, when the Richmond theatre was burned, and seventy persons, prominent in society there, perished in the flames. That terrible event caused a shock all over the country, and the story of it has been told and written up by eye-witnesses a thousand times, to the people of a later generation. Among the victims then were young and beautiful women, whose fate produced a deeper horror to the narrative of the awful catastrophe.

But the fall of the floor of the State-Capitol, by which, in an instant, many persons, and some were killed or severely injured, seems to be a disaster the horror of which can scarcely be less than that of the burning of the theatre. The men who went down in that frightful ruin were nearly all men of prominent position in the State or the city government. Most of them, doubtless, had families, and that the sudden deaths created by their fate may be fatally imagined. It was not to be wondered at that, as the news of the disaster spread over the city, all business was suspended, stores were closed and the whole population, as by a simultaneous impulse, became mourners as over a common calamity. Thus this grief the people of Richmond and of Virginia will have the sympathy of the people of the whole country.

The Virginia State Capitol, as every visitor to Richmond since the war will remember, had every appearance of being a well-built, substantial edifice. It has frequently been so crowded as it was yesterday, and no doubt was ever entertained of its stability. It is probable that the main floor of the Court Room could have borne the few hundred people that were upon it, and more too, but for the giving way of the crowded gallery and the shock of this additional weight suddenly plunging in upon it. Such a public edifice, which is liable to be crowded at times, ought to have no weak points; and if, by any accident, a gallery should give way, the floor beneath should be found still be secure. The faults of the damaged structure cannot be assigned to the hurried mode of building in recent times; for it is one of the oldest of our old building. But it is probable there were jobbers among contractors even in the days when it was probably bad at first, and have been rotting ever since. The lesson taught by this calamity is an obvious one, and it ought to be profited by everywhere. All buildings with wooden floors, which are likely to be crowded at times, ought to have the joists, floors, galleries and wooden pillars and posts subjected to a careful examination, and when signs of decay appear, new timber should be substituted. But in the erection of new public buildings, stone, brick and iron should alone be used.

THE MEDICAL STUDENTS AGAIN.

In the early part of next month the contributors to the Pennsylvania Hospital will be called upon to elect the managers for that institution, and to decide whether women students shall be admitted to the clinics. In anticipation of the action of the contributors certain of the enemies of free science have prepared and are circulating a pamphlet which is designed to induce the voters to exclude the women, and to make such a change in the management of the Hospital as shall forever after deprive female students of the privilege of attending the clinics. If the authors of this pamphlet are actuated by pure and decent argument to enforce their views they would deserve only commiseration. Bigoted men, who plant themselves squarely in the path of progress and refuse to be dislodged even by overwhelming public opinion, expressed clearly in behalf of a sex that is striving earnestly to accomplish a high destiny for itself and for the race, present a spectacle that is nothing more than melancholy. But the author of this pamphlet goes further than the religious zeal falsehood and indecency assaults the reputation of the Quaker managers of the Hospital and of the religious sect to which they belong, and strives to blacken the character of the pure women who suffered outrageous insult from the male students at the Hospital. Men who could be guilty of the acts which not only are unworthy to exercise any functions in any charitable institution, and unfit to be instructors of youth, but they deserve the scorn and contempt of every honest community. It is not necessary that we should attempt to controvert at length the untruthful statements contained by these persons. That a physician has a love of gain induced the managers to sell tickets to the women students; that they have not a sense of propriety when they come to perceive the indelicacy of mixed clinics; and that the insulted women were not ladies, are contradictions already by those who know the facts. The few extracts from the students is so small that it could not under any circumstances tempt the most avaricious of the managers, who are well known to be estimable gentlemen, with whose views of the propriety of admitting female students to the Hospital, every sensible man in the community agrees. The proposition to remove from Quaker influence an institution that was founded by that sect, and which has been conducted in the most successful and satisfactory manner through its whole existence by Friends, is ridiculous, and will be received by this community with contempt. But even apart from the claims of the female students to the title of ladies, we may say that men who would defend the conduct of the male students, as those pamphleteers do, prove by that defence that they are incompetent to determine what qualities are necessary to entitle men and women to be called gentlemen and ladies. A man must have at least a reasonable amount of gentle manly instinct himself, before he can determine the existence or absence of that quality in other people.

The pamphlet proves a fact that has been suspected: that the infamous assault upon the women students was inspired and supported by certain medical professors who are bitterly opposed to the admission of women to the practice of medicine. These persons have been working quietly but earnestly against the women ever since the first manifestation of such a pamphlet is the second blow struck for their cause. They have entered upon a contest that is as hopeless as the opposition displayed in old times against methods by stage-coach proprietors. It is the ancient ground of laggard conservatism against liberty and progress.

THE CROWN OF SPAIN.

A new candidate for the throne of Spain is announced. The cable despatches speak of him as Prince Frederick of Prussia, but as there are several Prussian princes named Frederick, it is impossible to say who is meant. The Prince Frederick, Frederick Charles Alexander, is sixty-nine years old, and he is not likely to be the man. He has a son, Prince Frederick Charles Alexander Nicholas, who is thirty-two years of age,and who acquired great distinction at the battle of Sadowa. There are several other Princes Frederick, including the present prince, and his oldest son, neither of whom is likely to be a candidate for Spanish honors, and Prince Frederick Charles seems likely to be the one alluded to in the despatches.

Naturally the Emperor Napoleon, who has a grudge against Prussia, or a dread of her, objects to having a Prussian made King of Spain, lest he should make threatening France on the Rhine frontier, and he does not want to have her also beyond the Pyrenees. Doubtless the intimation came from Bismarck, who can quietly contrived to have a Prussian Prince, Charles, of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, placed on the vacant throne of Ismmarin in 1866, in case the throne of Spain under Prussian on the vacant throne of Spain in 1870. The scheme is worthy of that shrewd statesman, who has done so much, within a few years, to extend and increase the power and influence of Prussia throughout Europe. It certainly would be at least embarrassing to France to have a Prussian King of Spain.

But even without the opposition of Napoleon, it does not seem at all likely that either the Cortes or the people of Spain would consent to have a German prince, and one of a Protestant family, for their reigning monarch. Although freedom in religion is allowed since the revolution, still the people are nearly all Catholics, and many of them very bigoted ones. The idea of a German Protestant as their sovereign would be most unpalatable to them. We incline to think the Government of Spain will have to look elsewhere for the monarch they so longingly desire. But there is evident impatience at the delay in finding a suitable man, and the Republicans of Spain are taking fresh courage. Even Serrano and Prim are said to be talking about a Republic. The experiment would be risky, but it could not make things worse than they are under the long-protracted anomalous state of things under the Provisional Government.

CLOTHING.

Important Decision.

SUPREME COURT OF P——O——N,

FINE CLOTHING vs. LOW PRICES.

A test case to prove that it is impossible to purchase a superior article of Ready-Made Clothing at the low prices commonly paid for interior garments.

The most important evidence submitted was that of the regular customers of Oak Hall, who testified that they habitually bought the very best of clothing at extremely low rates, and that it invariably gave satisfaction.

The Court decides that the thing is possible, and that it is done daily at the Public Buildings, at Sixth and Market streets, and recommends Oak Hall to all parties in any way of "non-suited" to carry their case to BROAD STREET.

A portion of Broad street, running north from Market street, is being repaved with the old cobble-stone nuisance. This is certainly a great waste of money, and a perpetuation of one of the most serious annoyances to which the public are subjected. Why cannot the question of paving Broad street with wood or some other pavement be settled by Councils at once? The thousands who drive and ride over that fine avenue are entitled to an early relief from the cobble-stone abomination, alike so destructive to nerves, comfort, vehicles and horses. Councils meet again to-day. Will not our city's spirited representative in the shoving machinery by which the public benefit of a good pavement on Broad street is to be secured?

MUSICAL.

Carl Gaertner's Soiree.

On Saturday next, at Dutton's piano warerooms, No. 1126 Chestnut street, Carl Gaertner will give a classical soiree, with an extremely interesting programme. Besides Spohr's exquisite composition for the nine different wind and stringed instruments, an appropriate one extended to the lovers of Mendelssohn to enjoy what is seldom heard in this country—his Sextuor composition for the same instruments. Mr. Gaertner has secured the services of several eminent musicians for this occasion.

A Conchological Concert.

Prof. Thunder has secured a large number of first-class singers for the Mass, and his reputation as a musician is a sufficient guarantee that the performance will be in every respect a good one.

THE McFARLAND CASE

DISAGREEMENT OF COUNSEL.

FROM NEW YORK.

[By the American Press Association.]

A Compliment to George Wilkes.

New York, April 28.—George Wilkes, the proprietor of the Spirit of the Times, has received from the Emperor of Russia the grand cross of the Order of St. Stanislas, as a recognition for the suggestion made to the Russian Government in reference to an overland railway to China and India by the way of Russia. The mark of royal favor entitles the holder to have his name inscribed on the Military School of Russia at the expense of the State.

The Ring—Fight Stopped.

The Kerrigan-Toohey fight, notwithstanding the very active preparations and solemn pledges of secrecy, proved a failure. Kerrigan and his party of friends reached Grandview at midnight. Tuohey and some friends who managed to escape the police at 2 o'clock, arrested in the Bay by a police boat at 3 o'clock this morning. The police then descended on the Block, and discovered the ring, stakes, bar, cards, and no row up the stump, with Captain Dodd's name in large letters.

The captured Tuohey man arrived in this city at 11 o'clock this morning. They were a desperate gang. The sloop was towed to the Stock by a tug, and towed to the city.

Mrs. Calhoun and the McFarland Case—Commencement of Disagreement of Counsel.

Charles Spencer, Esq., one of the counsel in the McFarland case, appears in a communication in the Herald, this morning, that the learned associates were displeased with the letter written to Theodore Tilton, and believing the entire accord of counsel necessary, he refuses to continue defending, regarding his attack on Mrs. Calhoun in his opening speech in the case, which was prepared entirely from communications to papers in different parts of the country and not from Mrs. Calhoun herself, as impressed, he supposed, prevailed that he had attacked the personal chastity of Mrs. Calhoun. As evidence of this he quotes a letter from a well-known anything to her prejudice, and as whatever language he used in his speech was the result of his opening speech had only been to convey to the public the facts as stated by letters and conversation mainly instrumental in producing the results upon which the defence in some material parts was based, he felt unwilling that any impression should go uncorrected. To his former personal friend for many years he has the letter in question, and regrets the necessity of his retirement from the case, but feels that it is a matter of duty to do so. It has been his sincere wish to correct an erroneous impression prejudicial to the lady.
