FRANCE AND THE PLEBISCITE. Co-morrow will be Plebiscitum day France; we Americans would call it election day, but the modern imitator of Casar clings to the Roman words, and submits his Senatus-Consultum to a Plebiscitum. Even this jargor of Casarism may have its effect upon the large mass of French voters, who are very ignorant When they receive the circular, eight millions of which have been printed, signed "Napoleon," and asking them to vote "Yes" to-

The few operators in gold have the market to themselves for the present, as the stock market absorbs just now the speculative interest of the street. It is the impression that the firmer ruling of gold to-day was sesisted by some of the stock cliques, with a view to helping their railway investments, on which a decline is gold seems to reflect invitable dullness, if not weakness and heavinoss.

The government list was heavy at the earlier boards, as as a quence of the large sales yesterday, but improved with the advance in gold, although the amount of budiness was below the average. This department of Wall street feels the general diversion of interest to the railways and miscelleneous shares, which are so active at the 8tock Exchange. The purchases are therefore almost wholly for investment, and made by private individuals and some of the moneyed corporations.

There was a better demand for money, owing to the increased volume of speculation at the Stock Exchange, and the rate on miscellaneous collaterals ranged as high as ix per cent., although the bulk of husiness on unobjectionable securifies was five.
