Canadian Forces.

Four companies of infantry and one of cavalry are concentrated at St. Armand. The latter; however, are destitute of horses.

A member of the Masonville company at that place deserted, but was subsequently captured, though not till after he had been wounded by a shot fired by one of his pursuers. One of the soldiers, on his arrival at St. Armand, was heard to say: "Weil, here we are at last; but if the Fenians come we will run like the devil. I know I shall."

This indicates the quality of the courage possessed by the volunteers.

A SUPPOSED MURDER AT SEA.

Foul Play on Board a Sloop--A Singular tase--- the Suspected Murderer Held for Trial.

case—the Suspected Murderer Held for Trial.

Superintendent Jourdan, of New York, yesterday morning received a letter from Mr. E. J. Dougherty. Chief of Police of Wilmington, Del., setting forth that he had in custody one Peter Petersen, a former residant of Wilmington, who had come into port in possession of the sloop Achilles, of New York, a small craft of five tons burden. There was no other person on board the sloop at the time. His possession of the sloop and being flush with money attracted the attention of the police, and he was accordingly arrested. On being questioned Petersen stated that the sloop had been purchased by Captain Herman Wardman and himself from one Theodore Hardy, a Danish stevedore, working at or near the Atlantic docks, Brooklyn, and that they left New York three weeks ago, and when off Great Egg Harbor, on the Jersey coast, Wardman was struck by the boom of the sloop and was thrown overboard and was drowned. That they had intended to buy junk along the coast, but after the captain was lost overboard he tut after the captain was lost overboard he (Petersen) went oystering. The papers of the sloop were made out in the sole name of Ward-man. Chief Dougherty became impressed with the idea that he had either stolen the sloop or had sailed in company, with Wardman, and had murdered him during the voyage. De-tective Bennett, of the Central office, was detailed to work up the case. As it was stated in Chief Dougherty's communication, Petersen had lived at 54 West street, a sailors' boarding-house, kept by Christian Lieber; the detective had visited that place, and found that both the men were well-known there. Warding was represented as a quiet inc.

that both the men were well-known there. Wardman was represented as a quiet, inoftensive man, while Petersen was said to be a man of entirely opposite character. It was also learned that the sloop Achilles had been purchased by Wardman from the widow of Henry Hardy, and Peter Hardy, her brother-in-law, for $500, and that it—had—been purchased by him solely, and paid for with his own money. The detective also learned that Petersen settled his bill at Lieber's on the 17th of May, at which time he stated that Wardman had sold the sloop for $110, and that he

This information, obtained by the detective, was embodied in a letter which was promptly despatched to Chief Dougherty at Wilmington, yesterday afternoon, by Superintendent Jourdan. Petersen will be held for examination by the United States authorities, and will have a great deal other side, but as they slowly defiled past the dividing line between the two countries, their numbers and extent became visible. The volunteers waited until the last of their antagonists had set foot on British soil, and then crack, crack, crack, came volley after volley of musketry into their ranks. The battle hadbegun. Bo unexpected was this attack that the Fenians became panic-stricken and scat-tered like wildfire behind the walls and fences and into the barus, behind the bark pile, and anywhere that shelter could be obtained from the death-dealing missiles that were beng showered upon them.

Seventy-Five Feet.

At the great fire in St. Paul last Thursday, Gen. O'Neill Wants to Die. two brothers, named Carl and August Mueller, who had a room in Concert Hall building, were cut off from escape by the rapid progress of the hames and smoke. They appeared at an upper story window, seventy-five or eighty feet from the ground. The St. Paul l'ioneer says:
"The two brothers appeared to hesitate, when they appeared at the window, and some of the spectators cried out to them to jump. The youngest was let out of the window first, the oldest brother holding him by the hand, toth being apparently unwilling to part company in that trying moment. Finally the suspended man was drawn back into the building as though determined to reach intended. ng, as though determined to remain instead of taking the horrible risk of such a dreadful ap. An instant after, however, a human form uddenly came through the window, and for a second was suspended in mid-air. The hor-ined spectators shuddered and turned away their eyes. A dull thud was heard, and the mangled form of one of the brothers rolled apparently lifeless down the steep declivity twenty-five or thirty feet beyond where it first struck, where he lay motionless and groaning. The second brother followed imgroaning. The second brother followed im-nediately after, and for the second time, within a moment almost, the speechless spec-ators witnessed the terrible leap. Both the brothers were carefully picked up and land apon beds which were quickly brought, and of a tree that was near by.

"As soon as it was known that two men had aken such a perilous leap the crowd began to surge down the builf to the point where the men lay and it was with great difficulty that they could be kept a sufficient distance from he sufferers to give the latter sufficient air. An examination showed how much they were

"Shortly after being picked up they were taken to the residence of their brother-in-law, where a critical examination showed that they had received injuries as follows: Carl has two or three ribs broken on the right side, one of which penetrated the right lung, making a cavity through which the air escapes when he breathes. One side of his face is badly bruised, and be is otherwise badly injured. Yet the physicians think with good care he may re-

"The younger brother, August, suffered a compound fracture of the wrist, and received some injury to his spine, besides severe bruises. He is not considered fatally injured."

[From Galignani's Messenger, of Paris, May 14.] At the dinner given by their Majestles the day before yesterday to the executive mem-bers of the Plebiscitary Committee, the Duke d'Albuféra was placed at the lett of the Empress and the Prince Imperial on her Majesty's right. The Emperor sat between Viscount de la Guéromière and Admiral Bouet-Villaumez. Near the Prince were Count de Lagrange, M. Emile de Girardin and M. Duvernois. Before dinner his Majesty, on entering, expressed his thanks to the members for their co-operation and exertions, and fully acknowedged the share which they had taken in the victory. The Emperor declared that they had rendered a greatservice in organizing throughout all France the action of the liberal conservation of the liberal conservation. out all France the action of the liberal conservative party, the influence of which is henceforward to be the sole agent in elections. The Chief of the State seemed favorable to the permanence of the committee, but suggested that it ought not to be composed of Senators and Deputies alone, because it would in that case recall too much of the chief of the Rua de Potitiers and much of the clubs of the Rue de Poitiers, and the Rue de l'Arcade. In the Emperor's view the body ought to form an assemblage of all the active influences, and create an effective bond between the chambers and the press; and, constituted under these new conditions, St. Sanveur company. General Jordan Before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs held a special meeting last night, at which General Jordan gave a detailed account of the condition of affairs in Cuba. He said that all the reports emanating from the Spanish au-thorities claiming that the rebellion was at an end was without the slightest foundation in fact. He laid before the Committee informa-tion received from the Island since he had left the same, showing that the insurgents were not losing in strength, but gaining in numbers and progress daily. His remarks made a good impression with the Committee who are in favor of securing such legislation as will cause the government to recognize them as a helliograph nower. belligerent power.

The Movement Broken Up---The First Battle---Killed and Wounded. ST ALBANS, May 26.—The Fenian bubble, as far as the movement in this direction is concerned, has burst. Soon after the arrest of General O'Neill the Fenian officers held a useless for them with the small number of men at their command to make any further attempts at invading Canadian soil.

The roads leading from here to Franklin are lined with returning Femans. There is not a Fenian now in Franklin. Guns, ammunition and blankets are scattered about in great abundance. The rank and file complain bit-terly of their officers, saying that they don't understand their business. The point chosen understand their business. The point for crossing was a most unfavorable the enemy were entrenched behind rocks. Half a mile distant there was an open field. An aide of Gen. O'Neill says a thousand men could not have driven the Canadians from their position. The Feniaus for the most part amesadly demoralized. At the first volley Canadian musketry three Fenians were killed and ten or fifteen wounded.

It is not known whether there was any Ca-nadians loss. Gen. Donnelly, in attempting to escape from Richard's house, was wounded in he leg, but not seriously. He was expected in St. Albans to-day.

Tuesday morning:
"About 1 o'clock this morning an alarm sounded from a box in the vicinity of St. Roche's Church which called the fire brigade promptly to the spot. Before water could be obtained the flames, fauned by a strong easterly wind, had communicated to a number of houses on Crown and Queen streets, and it be came evident that no chorts could save St. Roche's Church from the conflagration equal to those of 1845 and 1865. As the wind rose the flames gathered strength and infon-sity, leaping with fearful violence from one building to another, sweeping before them everything of a combustible nature in an up-ward direction. The fire had gained as far as Jacques's Cartier Hall, on St. Francis street, and in this direction carried everything befor and in this direction carried everything before it, up to the street known as old Bridge street. The projecting eaves of the hall caught five in several pieces, but, owing to their height, a sufficiently strong pressure of water could not be obtained to represent the suct where the fire be obtained to reach the spot where the fire had caught. Ladders were spliced, and hose raised, but not before a great deal of time was raised, but not before a great deal of time was lost. At old Bridge street, which runs from Vallier street to the river St. Charles, a number of citizens, directed by the priests, set to work to tear down all the fencing, galleries, railings and small buildings that could be disposed of by hand. The fire continued to sweep along with terrible force through King and Queen streets, where there were over lifty houses burning at one time. Ascension Day at Trinity Church. New York, May 26.—The services appropriate to Ascension Day at Trinity Church, to-day, were unusually grand and impressive, the exercises being participated in by twenty-three clergymen. The music was beautiful. In addition to grand small organs, a full band, with trumpets and kettle drums, lent an air of grandeur to the whole, which is not often seen outside of a Roman Catholic church. At 'II o'clock the procession entered in order, singo'clock the procession entered in order, singing the processional hymn, "We march to victory."

The altar and chancel were ablaze with The altar and chancel were ablaze with lights, which shed their lustre upon the masses of flowers; a large cross of white flowers towering up in centre of the altar. Upon reaching the altar the clergymen filed into the several places assigned to them, and general confession and subsequent prayers were intoned. Music was sung during the course of the service. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Morgan Dix, who took his text from the Rev. Morgan Dix, who took his text from the Gorpel of the day.

He confined himself principally to the docnal exposition of tcounselling absolute faith in the truth set forth in the Bible and Prayer Book in contradistinction to atheism and indifferentism conveyed in the doctrines of modern science. The Rev. gentleman saidthat, were a convenion of so-called Protestants to meet together they would spit upon the Apostles' Creed after the first four words—"I believe in God?"— Communion was administered by the rector and assistants to quite a large number of the congregation. The new feature of the introduction of a grand orchestra for the interpretation of the music of the service excited much interest and added a vast deal to the impressiveness of the exercises. The trumpets and drums rolled grandly out through the audi-torium of the church, and with the combined effects of the organ, lent a grandeur to the chorals impossible to have been obtained by other means. News From the Darien Expedition. By the arrival of the steamer Alaska, advice from the Darien Surveying Expedition to May 13 has been received. FIGHT YESTERDAY

Later and Fuller Details Three Fenians Killed and Several Wounded

On the Fenian Battlegield, Near Cook's Corners, St. Armand, C. E., May 25, 10 F. M.—The onward march from St. Albans was commenced in column of fours, General O'Neill, mounted on a small red horse, placing himself in front, flanked by a body-guard of four men on foot on each side. Their countenances were a serious aspect, although there were a few who laughed and joked as they passed along. Still it was evident that even they along. Still it was evident that even they realized the danger of their mission. Slowly and sadly moved the two hundred, following the highway until within twenty rods of the line, General O'Neill espied the red coats of the Canadlan volunteers and ordered a halt. This was effected beside an old brick house on the left side of the road and on the side of a parsely wooded hill. Farther along on the road at a distance of fifty feet were two barns facing each other and flanked on both the attacking Fenians.

Beyond the barns above spoken of the road passes across a bridge and is entirely unprotected. The position can perhaps be undershood by comparing it to the arc of a circle, placing the Fenian soldiers at the bottom and Addresses to the Hills. After the halt Gen. O'Neill faced about on his horse and addressed his countrymen as his norse and addressed his countrymen as follows:

Soldiers—This is the advance guard of the Irish-American army for the liberation of Ireland from the yoke of the oppressor. For your own country you now enter that of the enemy. The eyes of your countrymen are upon you. Forward, march!

Two men—John Rowe, of Burlington, and another whose name I have been unable to ascertain—dropped dead during this discharge and were left upon the field.

Lieut. Edward Hope, of Bridgeport, was hot through the thigh, and the Captain of a Long Island company sustained a flesh wound in the care. Several minor consultion ware.

Gen. O'Neill, who had been concealed behind the house, rushed forth with drawn sword and shouted to his scattering soldiers. Gaining an audience he said :

Men of Ireland: I am ashamed of you. You have acted disgracefully; but you have another chance of showing whether you are cravens or not. Comrades, I will lead you again, and if you will not follow me I will go with my officers and die in your front. I leave you now under command of Boyle and O'Reilly.
Skirmishing was then recommenced, and continued for about one hour, when Gen.O'Neill irew back his forces from the brow of the hill He was then approached by several of his the was then approximed by several of incres, who requested permission to charge the hill, but, bearing in mind the unlucky result of a similar operation at Fredericksburg during the rebellion, he refused. Yielding partially, however, to their wishes, he ordered them to charge across the open valley, and take a position on the wooded hill directly operate the Canadian force. take a position on the wooded hill directly opposite the Canadian forces. The Arrest. The General, in company with Boyle O'Reilly walked down the side of the hill and O'Reilly walked down the side of the hill and entered the parlor of the brick house, encountering General George Foster, who, with his deputy Thomas Farley, of St. Albans, was seated in the parlor. He reached out his hand, but the greeting was refused, and General Foster, placing his hand on O'Neill's shoulder, said "I arrest you, by virtue of my authority as a District Marshal of the United States."

"Sir," exclaimed General O'Neill, starting back as he snoke." I shall resist your arrest." back as he spoke, "I shall resist your arrest."
"It will be useless, sir," replied General

Foster. "But, sir, I am armed." "Sut, sir, I am armed."
"So am I," said the General. "John, open that carriage door. Now, Mr. O'Neill, get in, or I will throw you in. I am going to take you to St. Albans, right through the midst of our men, and if you make the slightest outcry I will shoot you dead." Resistance was useless, as the General had aid, and O'Neill placed himself in the carriage and was driven to St. Albans. In Durance Vile. An hour later he was taken before the United States Commissioner, Jacob M. Smalley, on a charge of violation of the neutrality laws, and, in default of $20,000 bail, was lodged in jail at Burlington.

At the Front. The fighting after this arrest, with the exception of an occasional shot or two, was not renewed. Some of the Fenians took up their homeward march, but the great majority re-turned suddenly to their eld camping ground, where they were joined by 150 recruits, who had just arrived under the command of Major Moore, of New York, and now assert their intention to renew their attack in the morning.
